Free concert features some strange sounds

The audience at the Pro Grabbaci Quintet's free concert Saturday at 8 p.m. in the Sheldon Memorial Art Gallery auditorium should find at least one work on the program entertaining, theatrical and funny, said David Kappy, group organizer.

"Scarlati," written by American composer Tim Broege, calls for the musicians to stomp, clap, whistle, whisper and recite a poem, Kappy said.

Calling the work a "celebration of old kinds of music," Kappy said "Scarlati" is performed with Renaissance percussion instruments such as finger cymbals, tambourine and triangle. An African talking drum is used, he said, because he could not find a Renaissance drum.

Members of the Pro Grabbaci Quintet are Debbie Roehl, a junior from Omaha, flute; Debbie Shidler, a senior from New York City, oboe; Diane Miller, a senior from Lexington, clarinet; Debbie Koehler, a graduate student from Norfolk, french horn; and Mark Kelley, a junior from Lincoln, bassoon. All are music majors.

Olympia Brewing Company, Olympia, Washington "OLY"®

Some things never change. First hinted at in 1919 with a patent for "a tool with which to open milk and fruit cans," the sleek steel line of the classic beer hook had to await the invention of the beer can by American Can in 1935.

When employee Dewey Sampson was detailed to invent this practically functional tool, he succeeded in uniting 30 years of thirsty throats with the contents of millions of cans of Oly.

It took skill and ingenuity and the result just can't be improved upon. The same goes for Oly. Some things never change. A great beer doesn't change. Olympia never will.
