

Recycle center to open pending legal agreement

The opening of a third recycling center in Lincoln is waiting only on a legal agreement between two parties owning buildings on either side of the center's proposed site.

Lincoln's Citizens for Environmental Improvement sponsors the recycling centers, which take most recyclables, including tin cans, molded plastic, paper and aluminum, said Connie Stauss, an organization member.

The new center will be located in the parking lot between the Lincoln Community Playhouse and the Charles H. Gere Branch Library, she said. The group is working on a legal agreement with owners of the two buildings which should be completed by the first week in May, she added.

Charles Dalrymple, director of city libraries, said there will be no problem in reaching a legal agreement.

"I think it's a matter of the wording of the contract," he said. "As long as it protects both parties, is clear-cut on what is being agreed upon and if it seems to say what we agreed upon, then I don't think there will be any problem," he said.

Stauss said the new center's site is a relocation of the former East High School recycling site, which was forced to close last fall because of vandalism.

Other Lincoln recycling center sites are at the City County Bldg., 555 S. 10th St. and at 2535 N. 33rd St., which is a self-service center. The centers operate from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturdays.

'Sunshine' backers halt petition drive

Despite differences in the Sunshine Initiative and a similar bill passed by the Nebraska Legislature, initiative promoters have killed their petition drive to get their initiative on the November election ballot.

Gov. J. James Exon signed into law last week LB797, which provides for a more open government. It was sparked last October by the introduction of a Sunshine Initiative, which was sponsored by Common Cause, a citizen's lobby group.

The Sunshine Initiative also called for more open government. Its proposals included regulations governing campaign expenditures and their disclosure, ceilings on campaign contributions and defining the role of the lobbyist.

The Coalition for Open Government is comprised of 16 Nebraska public interest groups who also were proponents of the Sunshine Initiative.

Marge Schlitt, legislative lobbyist for Common Cause, said she distributed copies of the initiative to state senators during the legislative session. Sens. Frank Lewis of Bellevue and Roland Luedtke of Lincoln co-sponsored the bill.

The initiative went through many amendments in the Legislature, but the Coalition is satisfied enough to stop the petition drive, said Don Wesely, coalition member and board of directors chairman for Nebraska University Public Interest Research Group.

LB797 established a Nebraska Accountability and Disclosure Commission, which becomes effective Feb. 15, 1977. The commission will audit and interpret the financial forms submitted by candidates and state and local government office holders.

However, Schlitt said the bill did not provide funds to pay personnel to administer the forms, which may be filled out starting July 1.

Wesely, a junior pre-law major from Lincoln, said some of the changes the Legislature made in the Sunshine Initiative's provisions are:

-No cash ceiling on campaign contributions. The initiative provided for a $400 ceiling for state elective offices and $250 for state legislators.

-Broader interpretation of a lobbyist, making it anyone who backs a legislative bill. The initiative said a lobbyist is someone who is paid or uses $1,000 to lobby.

-Adding the governor and secretary of state to the Nebraska Accountability and Disclosure Commission.

-The inclusion of small counties and towns in the applicability of the bill. (The initiative excluded them.)

-Making the bill nonapplicable to the state executive branch.

-Allowing state senators to lobby in the Legislature at the end of their terms of office. The initiative restricted senators to a two-year waiting period.

-A reduction in penalties for violators of the bill.

NETV logo undergoing use tests

The Nebraska Educational Television Network (NETV) still is checking for duplication of their new logo, which they plan to unveil May 1.

According to Ron Hull, programming director, NETV's Washington D.C. attorneys have been looking at all logos on record at the Bureau of Patents and Records, the National Association of Broadcasters, the National Association of Educational Broadcasters and several advertising bureaus.

He said they are focusing especially on logos using the letter "N", because NETV's new logo is a stylized "N". Checks also are being made in states that begin with an "N", he added.
