

Coach says Husker linebackers unsurpassed in quality and depth

By Mark Krause

John Melton, Nebraska's linebacker coach, has seen a lot of good linebackers in his 12 years at that position. But he said he never has had more quality depth than this year with seniors Steve Damkroger, Brent Evans, Steve McWhirter and sophomore Mike Knox as Husker linebackers.

Melton mentioned Tom Rudd, Bob Nelson and Jerry Murtaugh as talented linebackers who wore the Cornhusker jersey, but he said this group may be better.

"As far as depth goes, I don't think I've ever had this much," Melton said. He said all four are similar players.

"All are aggressive, they are fairly intelligent and they are rather durable," Melton said. "They have always worked hard and all have a lot of playing experience."

Because of this, Melton said he is able to substitute without losing quality at the position. Melton said this helps keep the linebackers fresh, and McWhirter, who started on the strong side opposite of Damkroger in Saturday's Iowa game, agreed with his coach.

"You don't get a chance to really get that tired," McWhirter said. He said substitution in the Iowa game "was done mostly by the quarter and we all played about the same amount."

Melton said his players performed well in the first half. However, he added, the second half was marred by missed tackles and a lack of enthusiasm.

McWhirter agreed with Melton and said he thought he played well but missed tackles at times.

"They will hit you," Melton said. He said this year's linebackers are "very, very physical."

"I think we all like to hit," Damkroger, the defensive captain, said.

"We try to be physical. That's what it's all about," McWhirter said. "We try to be as physical as we can."

With four good linebackers and just two starting positions, Melton said there is some competition. But Evans, who came to Nebraska as a fullback, said the players try to help each other.

"We work together real well," Evans said.

Melton said he thinks all three seniors will be looked at when the pro draft rolls around. As a group, their main weakness is speed, Melton said.

"They are not the fastest, but they run as fast as they have to get to the ball," Melton said, "and they sure like to get to the ball."

Melton said that when the three seniors graduate, his job will be tougher. Only Knox, who earned a varsity letter last year as a freshman, will return.

Intramurals

John Hansen, an independent, scored 41 points to win the intramural men's Frisbee skills competition Sunday. Gary Brollier of Acacia and Doug McCarthy of Abel 6 tied for second place with 38 points each. Alpha Tau Omega won the men's team championship.

Sara Lockwood of the Gators scored 20 points to win the women's Frisbee skills competition. Patty Luna, an independent, was second with 19 points.

In the co-recreational competition, Dean Schendt and Deb Bushchkamp combined for a 38 score to win the championship. Stan Campbell and Sara Lockwood combined for a 36 to win second place.

The intramural men's and women's cross country race will be at 4:45 p.m. Friday at Oak Lake Park.

Placekicking competition will be at 3 p.m. Sunday at Memorial Stadium.

Soccer tourney ahead

The Nebraska soccer team will participate in a tournament this weekend in Minneapolis. Other teams in the tournament are Minnesota, Northwest and Lakehead University of Canada.

Nebraska's first game is Friday against Minnesota, a team that upset Creighton 3-0 last week.
