U.S. warships bombard mountains near Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon - U.S. warships bombarded the mountains east of Beirut for the first time in a month Sunday in retaliation for an attack on U.S. Marines at Beirut Airport, a Marine spokesman said. The Marines fought back for three hours with automatic rifles, heavy artillery and the five-inch guns of the battleship New Jersey and destroyer Tattnall. he said. A fuel depot at the Marine base was hit, but no Marines were reported hurt. In Washington, a Pentagon spokesman confirmed that the warships had fired their guns. "The Marines" position came under fire at about 8:20 a.m. (CST)," he said. "They returned fire and were supported by two ships."

Munif Hamad, of the Druze Progressive Socialist Party, whose gunners have shelled the Marines before, told Reuters the U.S. gunfire killed one person in Shweifat, a Druze town-ship in the foothills east of the airport. Hamad said several men, women and children were wounded. He said villages in the mountains behind Shweifat were heavily damaged, but knew nothing of casualties elsewhere. The battle closed the airport for three hours. Flights resumed in the evening.

Reagan to urge arms talks

WASHINGTON - President Reagan today will urge the Kremlin to return to arms control talks and join him in efforts to improve strained U.S.-Soviet relations, a senior administration official said Sunday. Reagan will also defend his efforts to strengthen U.S. strategic forces as a guarantee for world peace and stability, the official said. The speech is to be delivered to an audience of congressmen and administration officials in the White House East Room (9 a.m. CST) less than two months after the Kremlin walked out of three separate arms control negotiations in Geneva and Vienna. The administration official said Reagan's main theme would be a willingness to pursue "a realistic and constructive dialogue with the Soviet Union . . . and a stable, beneficial, relationship" while strengthening the U.S. nuclear deterrent.

Shultz to seek relations thaw

LONDON - Secretary of State George Shultz may try to begin a new U.S.-Soviet thaw by encouraging Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko to renew talks on reducing military forces in Europe, a U.S. official said Sunday.

The official, who spoke on condition that he not be named, also confirmed British press reports that Syrian President Hafez Al-Assad took a tough stance at a meeting with British Foreign Secretary Sir Geoffrey Howe Thursday against making any concessions toward withdrawal of Syrian forces from Lebanon. The official, briefing reporters on Shultz's meetings Sunday with British leaders, said Shultz wanted renewal of all U.S.-Soviet arms talks but implied Western allies may be ready particularly to offer a new position on the military forces.

In Stockholm, anti-nuclear groups from Western Europe and the United States opened a meeting Sunday, next door to the site of a 35-nation conference on reducing the risk of war in Europe. The International Peace Coordination and Communication Center, headquartered in the Netherlands, opened its session with an appeal to Washington and Moscow to stop testing and stationing nuclear arms.

Hundreds pay tribute to Haddad

MARJAYOUN, Lebanon - Maj. Saad Haddad, the southern Lebanese militia leader who died Saturday of cancer at 47, lay in state Sunday in his home town as hundreds of Lebanese and Israelis paid him tribute. Buildings in this predominantly Christian town five mules north of the Israeli border were festooned with the Lebanese flag and posters of Haddad, who broke off from the Lebanese army in 1976 and allied his force of Christian and Shiite Moslem militiamen with Israel. Haddad is unlikely to have much effect on the course of events there, Lebanese military sources said Sunday. They noted that Maj. Haddad's "Army of Free Lebanon" has operated normally since ill health forced him to hand over temporary command to a deputy, Sharbel Barakat, in October.
