

Kerrey proclaims day to promote agriculture

Gov. Bob Kerrey proclaimed today Agriculture Day in Nebraska in honor of the nationwide celebration of Agriculture Week.

Rex Messersmith, director of the Nebraska Livestock and Feeders Association, said that statewide events will honor agriculture.

Nebraska's state senators will meet today at a noon luncheon at the governor's mansion, Messersmith said. The event is sponsored by the state department of agriculture and the Ag 40 group. Ag 40 consists of 40 representatives from agricultural organizations around the state. The group works on projects in the College of Agriculture, Messersmith said.

A "Beef Tidbit" dinner will be served tonight in the Capitol Rotunda, Messersmith said. The event is sponsored by the Nebraska Feeders Auxiliary and the Cowbells, a women's organization that works with the Nebraska Stockgrowers in promoting beef throughout the state.

An agricultural display will be on exhibit at the Gateway Shopping Mall, and radio stations and newspapers will promote agriculture throughout this week, Messersmith said.

Analysis By Mike Weibel

Frontier Airlines plans to discontinue service to Scottsbluff and North Platte June 6 because the flights are not showing a profit, said a Frontier Airlines employee. The reduction will limit service to three Nebraska cities: Grand Island, Omaha and Lincoln.

John Jones, Frontier Airlines' city manager, said only about 180 people fly to North Platte each month and 250 to Scottsbluff.

Presently, Frontier has two flights a day that stop in North Platte and Scottsbluff on their way to Denver. Round trip flights to North Platte and Scottsbluff cost $128 and $106 respectively.

For young men and women going west — or elsewhere — for spring break, a less expensive way to get home is by bus. Greyhound is offering a student discount between March 22 and April 2. Students can travel anywhere in the U.S. that Greyhound goes round trip for $100 or less.

Students must show their student I.D. cards when buying tickets.

Students who live in Omaha have many travel alternatives for spring break.

Greyhound and Trailways offer a relatively inexpensive fare to Omaha, charging $10.20 and $11.70 respectively a round trip.

The Lincoln Eppley Xpress provides a direct ride from Lincoln to Omaha's Eppley Airfield. The X-Press, which leaves from the downtown Hilton, 9th and P streets, will take students to Omaha for $14.

Amtrak will move students along the rails to Omaha for $10 each way.

Frontier Airlines offers the cheapest flight to Omaha from Lincoln charging $22 each way.

"Most students drive home for spring break," Jones said.

When asked how they plan to get home for spring break, UNL students agreed with Jones about their choice of transportation.

"I have a car and I don't like buses," said Tim Gubbels of Randolph.

"I don't know how we're getting home yet," said Darrell Parks and Craig Averman of Omaha. "We have lots of friends down here with cars. We could take a bus if that's our last resort."

Brad Rustan of Bellevue was a bit perplexed. "I don't know...a flying carpet," he said.

Corrections

A page one article Monday, March 19, regarding the March 17 NU Board of Regents meeting incorrectly stated that the board will act next month on elimination of UNL programs, including the department of black studies.

The programs in question are at UNO. The Daily Nebraskan regrets the error.

Two headlines were inadvertently reversed on page 5 of Monday's Daily Nebraskan. The headline "SWAP..." should go over the continued portion of the guest opinion written by David A. DeCoster, dean of students. The headline "Faculty, students..." should go over the continued portion of a guest opinion written by Todd Nelson.
