U.S. Embassy security not negligent — Reagan

NEW YORK — President Reagan Sunday acknowledged security at the U.S. Embassy in Beirut was only "75 percent" complete when it was bombed last Thursday, but denied any negligence was involved.

At least eight people were killed when a bomb exploded in a hail of gunfire at a wall surrounding the U.S. Embassy annex. The administration has been criticized for moving personnel from west Beirut into the new embassy in east Beirut before all security precautions were in place. He defended the decision to move into the new premises, saying it was considered "safer territory and a safer building."

Reagan also rejected charges that the attack might have been prevented if U.S. Marines had not been withdrawn from guard duty and replaced by people hired locally.

"The Marines cannot be exterior guards outside the compound. That is foreign territory and there was no need inside the compound for a detachment of 80 Marines," he said.

Officials continue bombing probe

BEIRUT, Lebanon — United States experts Sunday continued their investigation into last Thursday's suicide car bomb attack on a U.S. Embassy annex in east Beirut as Lebanese leaders promised full cooperation in implementing any new security measures. An embassy spokeswoman said Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy left Beirut Saturday after a 24-hour visit following the attack, which U.S. officials say killed eight people, including two U.S. servicemen, and wounded 35.

Three or four U.S. experts, including Robert Oakley, head of the State Department's Office of Combat and Terrorism, were continuing the inquiry into apparent security lapses that allowed a suicide car bomber to get within a few yards of the annex's main entrance. Murphy told reporters Saturday the U.S. would not pull its diplomats out of Lebanon. President Amin Gemayel and Prime Minister Rashid Karami had assured him they would implement any security conclusions reached by the U.S. team, he added.

Shultz may offer U.S. mediation

NEW YORK — Secretary of State George Shultz said Sunday the United States wanted to be helpful in securing withdrawal of Israeli forces from Lebanon if the parties concerned wished. Shultz made the statement as Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy had talks in Damascus to see whether Syria believed the United States could be helpful in the Lebanon situation.

Former Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir told the New York Times in an interview published Sunday that Israel's new coalition government intended to ask the United States to serve as a go-between with Syria to work out arrangements for withdrawal of Israeli troops from southern Lebanon. Shamir said he would raise the possibility of a new U.S. mediating role in talks with Shultz here next week. Shamir, who is now Israel's foreign minister, was reported to have suggested that Israel would no longer insist on simultaneous Syrian withdrawal from Lebanon as a condition for pulling out its own troops.

If the United States decides to mediate, it would be its first active role in the Middle East since the Lebanese government last March, acting under Syrian pressure, cancelled the U.S.-sponsored accord for withdrawal of Israeli troops.

Violence erupts in France, Spain

PARIS — Violence broke out on both sides of the French-Spanish border Sunday as angry crowds protested a French announcement that it would extradite three suspected Basque separatist guerrillas to Spain, police said. Three Spanish Basques who are wanted on murder and assault charges in Spain will be extradited, France's European Affairs Minister, Roland Dumas, said Sunday. Four other Basque fugitives were deported to Togo Sunday, French officials said.

Shortly after the announcement, hundreds of youths began a rampage through the streets of the Spanish border town of San Sebastian, Spanish police said.

Across the border, in St. Jean de Luz, French police fired tear gas grenades to disperse some 2,000 protesters chanting "Mitterrand assassin," eyewitnesses said.

Traditionally, France has not extradited people charged with political crimes, but the courts recently have approved Spanish extradition petitions for Basque separatists charged with violent crimes.

The Spanish government welcomed the French decision, saying it marked the end of the use of France as a safe haven for suspected Basque guerrillas.

Reagan, Gromyko meet socially

NEW YORK — President Reagan Sunday met Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko socially and then publicly called for a realistic and constructive relationship with the Soviet Union. The brief meeting was Reagan's first personal contact with a high-level Soviet official in his 34 years as president. He holds formal talks with Gromyko at the White House Friday. The two men shook hands and talked for about a minute at a reception for world leaders marking the opening of the United Nations General Assembly.

In his remarks later, Reagan called for frank and open discussions to help create a safer world. He pledged that the United States would not shirk in its effort to deal with differences peacefully and called upon other nations to make the same commitment.

Setting it Straight

An article on the UNL Pre-Dental Club in Friday's Daily Nebraskan was misleading. The club, which is not offered through the College of Dentistry, has an intern program which helps interested students get placed only to observe dental practices. Students also have the privilege to observe at the UNMC College of Dentistry's specialty departments such as oral surgery. The interns do not actually work nor do they get paid. Club members also have access to procedural information which can help them get applications to various U.S. dental colleges. Club requirements include participating in one of two social events per semester and one fund-raising event per year. Members also must observe a dentist at work for a total of four hours per semester.

One topic to be discussed at a meeting is "free gingival graft," a periodontal technique.

For more information on the club, call the Pre-Dental Club office at 472-5379 Monday through Friday in the late morning or mid-afternoon.
