The bob is also a popular style, but has undergone minor alterations. The cut is layered very subtly on top, and given a light perm to enhance body.

Samland said she doesn't see many women coming in with long single length hair. The few that are keeping the cut are updating it by getting light perms, and having some layering done on the top and along the outline of the face, once again to enhance the body.

As for men's styles, Samland noted that men, in general, are becoming more hair-conscious. One of the styles that made an appearance last fall will still be going strong this spring. The hair is cut short on the sides and often slicked back with the help of various stylers gels. A light perm is given to the rest of the hair to form soft, natural looking curls.

Both sexes are making use of the wide variety of coloring treatments available. These treatments can give those who don't have the time to spend outdoors highlights that come with sunbathing. Beyond that, the possible uses of coloring treatments are only as limited as one's imagination.
