

ASUN makes Nebraskans more aware of the university

"We have begun on the grass roots level," she said.

"If Nebraskans simply let their senators in the Legislature do as they feel toward NU, the university is going to get it in the neck every time," Scudder said.

"So we have to let Nebraskans know how important UNL is."

Teacher evaluations

Scudder said she wants to see more effective use of teacher evaluations by department chairpersons. Students should be able to review the evaluations in order to figure out who are the good and the bad professors, she said.

"We should be able to use the evaluations to get positive change in teaching," Scudder said. ASUN members will talk to the faculty senate about this, she said.

Another concern of Scudder's is student advising.

"There is about one advisor for every 50 students," she said. This ratio makes it hard for advisors to get to know their students, she said.

Professor incentive

Professors need an incentive to become better advisors, she said. Most students need to have close ties with their advisors. Otherwise, she said, students may lose their academic vision, take classes that won't go toward their major and end up spending an extra semester at UNL.

Scudder said ASUN will continue to work toward gaining a student regent vote. Although the ASUN president is a member of the Board of Regents, the president cannot vote.

Rec center

Since last year many students expressed the need for a new recreation center, Scudder said a committee had been set up and recently laid the groundwork necessary for a legitimate proposal for its construction.

Scudder said that in early August she attended a four-day conference in San Francisco, with student body presidents from nearly 20 universities. The main issues discussed at the conference, she said, were those that affect education on the national level.

"It will prove to be beneficial throughout the year," she said, "because of all the contacts I made. If I want to know what some student government is doing about a certain issue on another campus, I can just call them up."

Scudder, who is from Lincoln, said she will graduate in May and will enroll in graduate school in either educational administration or English.

Scudder said ASUN is hosting a "Party on the Plaza" Tuesday at 13th and O streets in the lobby of the National Bank of Commerce. It is for all UNL students, she said. Free food, pop and music will be provided by KFRX.

"Five thousand students came last year," she said. "It should be a lot of fun."
