

Bottom 10, Apel's Picks return to DN

Welcome to the sports section of the Daily Nebraskan's back to school issue. On these pages, you'll be treated to stories about the Nebraska football team, the Nebraska cross country teams, the Nebraska football team, the Nebraska women's softball team and, of course, the Nebraska football team.

One of the primary goals of the DN Sports department is to not get sued or end up in jail. Along with that, our goal is to provide coverage of all Nebraska sports and try to provide improved coverage to some of the less-known sports on campus. One thing you will see occasionally is an Associated Press wire story. Our main focus will be on local stories, but the wire will allow us to provide coverage of some national stories that may be of interest to the reader.

The sports page will once again feature Steve Harvey's Bottom Ten. Harvey's column, which lists his 10 worst teams in college and professional ranks, has run nationally for the past 10 years.

Another feature that will return to the sports section is Jeff Apel's "Apel's Picks." Apel, who will serve as First Down Magazine's editor this fall, returns after last year's fine effort. Each week during the football season, Apel will predict the outcome of selected college and professional games, and then cap the year off with a bowl prediction column.

The DN Sports department will continue to cover intramural sports in the Rec Scoreboard section. More coverage will be provided to championship games and bigger intramural events.

Sports Editor Chuck Green will provide readers with a weekly column and Steve Thomas will kick in a column from time to time.

Some of the teams to keep an eye on this year, besides the football team, are the volleyball team, coached by Terry Pettit, which will be a legitimate challenger for the national title, Francis Allen's men's gymnastics team and the women's softball team, led by first-year coach Ron Wolforth.

Nebraska basketball fans will also want to watch the men's and women's basketball teams, both led by first-year coaches this year. Danny Nee will inherit a team that made its first National Collegiate Athletic Association basketball tournament appearance last season, while Angela Beck will lead a women's team that had no players graduate from last year.
