

'Happy' play hits Wesleyan

By Cherie Krueger
Staff Reporter

A happy end is coming to Nebraska Wesleyan University.

No, the school is not closing. It is going to be the site of the musical production, "Happy End."

The play, which opens Friday, is set in 1920s Chicago, and is the story of gangsters and Salvation Army workers. One of the workers becomes infatuated with one of the gangsters, and the play develops into a social commentary on how similar the two groups of people really are.

The musical's stage director, Anthony Clark-Kaczmarek, said parts of the story line had been compared to "Guys and Dolls," but that it was actually much different.

"Happy End" playfully examines two different facets of society ... seemingly at opposite ends of the spectrum," said Clark-

Kaczmarek, a Nebraska Wesleyan senior. "High-spirited, comical characters, melodramatic plot twists and sharp, biting social commentary make this musical delightful for audience members."

Nebraska Wesleyan senior William Whitney is the musical director for the production. He will use a small brass band to produce the German cabaret-style music that is much different than what would be found in most Broadway musicals.

"Happy End," a Kurt Weill/Bertolt Brecht musical, will play at Nebraska Wesleyan University's McDonald Theatre in the Elder Memorial Speech and Theatre Center at 51st Street and Huntington Avenue. The Nebraska Wesleyan Department of Communication and Theatre Arts is putting on the production with the assistance of the university's department of music.

Performances are scheduled for 8 p.m. March 1-2 and March 8-9. There also will be a matinee on March 10 at 2 p.m. Tickets are $5 and are available at the McDonald Theatre Box Office.

Zombie show has it all

By Patrick Hambrecht
Music Critic

Audience members won't get much for their money at the Bush concert next Wednesday — at most, probably a live performance and a banner with the band's name on it.

But at the White Zombie concert on Tuesday, the group presented a 12-foot devil head,

Band frontman Rob Zombie told the young audience it was the crowd's duty to support bands like his own because "the more that happens, the sooner we'll get rid of [expletive] like Bush."

With a voice like a bad cough, Rob Zombie's vocals rumbled like a freight train as he did a jig from one side of the stage to the other. His visual counterpart, Sean Yseult, strutted that thin line between speed metal stoicism and biker babe sultriness as she fired out a never-ending barrage of bass lines.

But the real hero of the show may have been the movie footage featured on a huge screen behind the band. As one image followed the next with lightning speed, the entire arena seemed to go into a seizure, with a freaky similarity to the multi-media brain-washings featured in "A Clockwork Orange" and "Red Dawn."

Greg Seher, a criminal justice major at the University of Nebraska at Omaha, said his new facial injury proved the band's greatness.

"I got a bloody nose within five minutes in the mosh pit," he said. "This is the toughest show I've ever been to, and I've been to Metallica, Pantera. These guys rule."

"They want us to know that the devil's out there, but Jesus can provide for your sins," Seher said. "You have to be careful, and each man chooses his own path."
