

Weekend alight with films for all

DENNIS RODMAN, the oft-suspended and now-injured basketball player, makes his big-screen debut with Jean-Claude Van Damme in the action-thriller "Double Team."

Lots of big-name films open in Lincoln's theaters Friday; but the quality of the movies is, as always, unknown until you plop down your six bucks. Pick one or two and take a chance.

For the brainless action and martial arts fans, there's the ego-vehicle "Double Team" with Jean-Claude Van Damme and Dennis Rodman. Lots of explosions, spin kicks and basketball references in this flick. Acting? Yeah, right.

In an update of the popular television and book series, Val Kilmer stars in "The Saint," the story of a charming rogue who is a master of disguise and an even better thief. Elisabeth Shue ("Leaving Las Vegas") co-stars as a scientist who holds a secret that Simon (Kilmer) has been hired to steal. Looks like lots of high-tech action, drama and romance in this one.

The insults zip back and forth between a divorced couple in "That Old Feeling," starring Dennis Farina and Bette Midler. About to get married, a woman must invite her divorced parents who "hate each other with a nuclear capability" to the event. So, naturally, they fall in love again. Looks like fun!

"Inventing The Abbotts" follows two brothers who begin dating three sisters in this 1950s romantic-comedy. The movie stars Joaquin Phoenix ("To Die For,") Billy Crudup ("Sleepers") and Jennifer Connelly, and is definitely made for the college audience. See it with someone you love — or at least someone you like a little bit.
