The great majority of Nebraska beer retailers observe the closing hour regulations in their communities. Patrons who ask them to violate that regulation are asking them to take the grave risk of losing their retail license-and their livelihood.

By their conscientious law observance, retailers are cooperating with the Nebraska Brewers and Beer Distributors Committee in its program of sincere assistance to law enforcement officials to keep beer retailing on a plane as wholesome as the beverage itself.

YOU, the public, are also asked to cooperate in this program. You can do so by not asking the retailer to sell after legal hours . . . and by refusing your patronage to the few who do. Give your patronage to the law-abiding retailer. He's the one who'll stay in business permanently, anyway.
