Holt County Pioneer Dies in South Dakota

Christen Hansen Christensen better known as Christ Christensen, passed this life Oct. 25, 1941 at the home of his sister, Mrs. S. P. Leslie, who resides ten miles south of Gregory, South Dakota. He was the eldest son of Martin and Minnie Christensen, born in Denmark a few months prior to their emigration to the United States where, as Charter Members, they settled as members of the "Scandinavian Colony" in western Iowa; a settlement of which, the state of Iowa, has always been proud. In 1880, while yet a mere boy, he came with his parents to Holt County, Nebraska, where, some twenty-six miles north, of what is now, O'Neill, but at that time, more commonly known, as Colonel O'Neill's "Irish Colony" they settled on a homestead which embraced a beautiful spot on the banks of Turkey Creek. At the age of fifteen, he went into the employ of Joe Frost as stage driver, and carried the mails along the winding trail which followed the south banks of the Niobrara river. Later, this route was discontinued, and still a boy, he went into the employ of Arthur Cruise, one of the cattle kings of the Niobrara Valley and continued with him, till a later period when he went into the same business for himself, and continued in that business till the barbed fences, spoiled the ranges of Northern Nebraska. In 1895 he was married to Miss Hattie Clevenger, a native child of Holt County, and from this union, four children were born; all of whom survive him. Moving with his family to Spencer, Nebraska, in the early nineteen hundreds, with a promising competence for later years, he, with his father, fell victims of the epidemic of Bank failures, which forced him to labor more strenuous than his age could endure. Bridge building and house moving, his strength was impaired, and this, with the years of drouth, and depression generally, left him in straits not warranted by his industrious and integrous life. It was Christ that hauled this writer into Nebraska, and dumped him out at the mouth of Turkey Creek, where his parents too had chosen a residence along that little stream. Just three weeks to a day, I went to visit him at the home of his sister, and finding him alone, we spent the day renewing the many happenings which had transpired during our sixty years between our boyhood and present old age. We talked of the hardships of the early settlers; of the scanty but always welcome fare, extended each other as they strove to survive. How we often relished a cone-pone, of a grouse or fish baked in the ashes or swung on a limb near the campfire. Of the fat pumpkin pies, meat shortcakes, and plum-pudding baked by our mothers when welcoming us home from a journey, or more prolonged stay at employment. Of the porterhouse steaks and oysters, when on affluence in the Cities permitted the dangers encountered breaking up a milling herd of cattle in the treacherous streams we were forced to ford; of the Indians stealing cattle from the ranchmen and the retaliations in reprisals; how this practice lead to the organized thieving from the settlers when the ranchers were forced out by the homesteader. How the Vigilantes organized to correct it all. Yes, he had lived through all of this, yet at all times his efforts were always exerted to promote peace and peaceful association, but equally willing to fight or exterminate, if necessary to tranquil existence. He talked on—and, for the first time in over half a century of personal association, he for the first time ventured on his view of religion. I quote in his own words: "Did it ever occur to you, that there is too little tolerance practiced between the different religious sects, to be Christ like? If any one derives any consolation or pleasure or comfort, through his belief in any faith, it seems to me cruel, to try and discourage them in the faith they have been taught, it harms no one, and in the end, dying is a matter between man and his maker, and no creed, or adherence to any set of Dogmas, can change or make it different. I was taught to honor and reverence the teachings of Luther, and it never makes me happy to hear it decided or scorned: for I feel that the faith taught us by our mother, is next to a faith in a God, and I wish to respect and honor them both in their contribution to my conscious existence, and, I will accept the change from a conscious existence to unconsciousness as of the wisdom of a God which I perceive in every vital element of the universe, and not as a choosing of by own. I feel that a power which has sustained me in my conscious existence, will take care of me in any future which he may ordain as he did, in the time before being made conscious.

 He also leaves two sisters and one brother; Mrs. S. P. Leslie, and C. M. Christensen, both of Gregory, S. D., and Mrs. Carry Peppery, of Keyapaha, S. D. They were all at the burial services, held at Spencer, Nebraska, on the 30th of October, and it was surprising indeed, to see the hundreds in the throng who still, with their old bedgrounds, and come to honor a pioneer who had no peer.
 A Friend.

Night School Classes Being Held Here

Classes are being organized for the benefit of those who are employed during the day, but who would be interested in pursuing some course now in which they could earn college hours credit that could be reserved for use when attending college in the future. There are also many courses which unemployed people might take up with profit. O'Neill Study Center is growing! These classes will meet in the evenings for the convenience of the group participating. Anyone interested in attending should contact Miss Anna Donohue, Study Center director, in the basement of the Annex Building where the center is located. University of Nebraska Extension Courses for residence or correspondence credit at a cost in accordance with the economic status of the registrant.
