Please don't make Christmas calls to war-busy centers

Long distance lines, on Christmas Eve and on Christmas Day, will be busy with the urgent business of war—vital calls that must go through.

On top of these war calls will be many thousands of calls of men in the service trying to share a few minutes of the holidays with those at home.

As a result, long distance lines will be overloaded, even if there are no other Christmas calls. In spite of everything we can do, many calls will be delayed and some won't get through at all. More lines can't be built now because copper and other materials are needed for planes, tanks and shells.

Won't you please help to keep the lines clear for the men in uniform by not making any Christmas calls, especially to centers of war activity.

We feel sure you'll cooperate. Thank you.
