> While The Cost of Most Living Items Has Increased Since 1939 The Cost of Electricity Has Dropped"

Wow Mickel Buys Just As Much Electricity Today As It Did Before The War.

The following taken from an article which appeared recently in Retailing Home Furnishings:

By C. W. Kellogg President, Edison Electric

THE stability and resourcefulness of the electric light and power industry is again being demonstrated by the present war emergency. All demands for electricity for the muni-tions and armament of the armed forces have been successfully met in every section of the nation; the requirements for civilian use have been covered without resort to curtailment or rationing and the margin of reserves for the country, as a whole, has been increased substantially over last year's levels.

Along with the progressive construction of new munitions plants the con-version of existing facilities has freed for the production of war materials much of the load which was formerly devoted to peacetime and civillan uses. Largely as a result of these characteristics of the war effort, utility sales of industrial power increased only 16 per cent in 1942 notwithstanding the enormous increases in war expenditures of 377 per cent during the same period and the corresponding increase in the production of munitions. Industrial power sales -om 76 billion kilowatt hours

1943 Outlook-Ample Capacity

In view of existing margins of reserves in generating capacity and scheduled additions to this capacity in 1963, it now appears that in every sector of the country there will be ample generating capacity to serve the peak demands reasonably to be expected. This takes into account existing trends in power demands and all the new demands for power that are in sight for this year or ean be anticipated at this time. No power shortage is on the horizon for 1943, when America's war effort is expected to be at its peak.

Before "Pearl Harbor" 5c bought a lot of electricity . . and it buys just as much today. For, although the cost of practically all other household items you buy has increased, your electric rates remain at the same low level.

Your electricity is truly a bargain . . . for throughout Nebraska, served by Consumers Public Power District, you can still enjoy all you need for your many everyday rerequirements at a cost of only a few pennies per day.

There's no shortage of electricity in Nebraska . . . use all you need and use it . . irely to help you to better living.
