The Frontier Is Over Sixty-Three Years Old

With the issue of May 13, 1943, The Frontier started the sixty-fourth year of its existence. Sixty-three years ago the paper was established by W. D. Mathews, and during the years of its publication it has faithfully chronicled the happenings of O'Neill and Holt county, rejoicing with the people in their joy and joining them in their sorrow.

The Frontier was conducted for several years by W. D. Mathews, then sold to J. H. Riggs, who conducted the paper until 1892, when he disposed of the same to W. D. Mathews, who also purchased The Item, a paper owned by the late Clarence Selah and had been run for a year by Clyde King and D. H. Cronin. Then The Frontier Printing Company was formed and in March, 1892, the issue of the 10th of that month contained the names of King & Cronin as managers and W. D. Mathews as editor. For one year this partnership continued and then Mr. Mathews retired, his interest being purchased by King & Cronin, who became the sole owners and publishers of the paper. Mr. King retired from the firm on August 13, 1896, and since that time the writer has been the publisher and owner of the paper.

Fifty-one years is a long time, and that is the period that has elapsed since we first entered the office of The Frontier as one of its editors, owners and managers in March, 1892. For a year before that we were one of the publishers of The Item, so that we have been in the newspaper business in O'Neill for 52 years past.

The files of The Frontier contain a history of this section of the state that would be mighty interesting reading matter to the present generation. During the past fifty-one years we had the populist invasion; the rainmaker; the Barrett Scott case; the Rosebud registration; the First World War, and many other minor incidents that made history, not only in this county but in the state of Nebraska, and during all this time this newspaper was the faithful chronicler of the events of the day and still continues to be. That it has been faithful in publishing the news of the day is evidenced by the fact that we have hundreds of readers on our lists who have been faithful subscribers for from twenty-five to forty years and many of them their parents received the paper before they were born.

What the future has in store we cannot foresee but we are confident that The Frontier will be here to celebrate its 100th anniversary and that it will in the future, as in the past, continue to work for the advancement and betterment of the city, county and state and publish the news without fear or favor.

KEEP YOUR WAR BONDS UNDER LOCK AND KEY

PERHAPS you have never had a safe deposit box. Well, don't let that keep you from renting one now. Those War Bonds of yours are important property and should have safe deposit protection. True, they are registered—which means that only the rightful owner can collect on them. BUT, their loss would cause you inconvenience and mental anguish. So rent a box for them, and for your other valuable papers such as insurance policies, mortgages and deeds. The cost is small.

Views of Congress
By Dr. A. L. Miller, M. C.

The support given the recent bond drive by the weekly newspapers was an inspiring demonstration of patriotism. Whole pages of valuable advertising space was freely contributed. In many cases local businessmen helped with their subscriptions, but it took time and effort on the part of the publisher to solicit this help. This time and space deeply cut into the earnings of these publishers at a time when they are having a real struggle to keep going in the face of loss of advertising and increased costs of labor and supplies. The publishers would be the last ones to expect special commendation for their help.

Recognizing their difficulties and realizing the absolute necessity of preserving the weekly newspapers of the country, Senator Bankhead has introduced a bill, S. 1073, to appropriate money to pay for this kind of government advertising. With OPA, WPB, Food Administration, OCD, etc., sending out information about new regulations and changes in regulations and the many other government agencies flooding them with news releases and propaganda, it is necessary for the newspapers to give column after column of free publicity. So much is received every week that editors must spend valuable time determining what is most important, for he does not have the space to print it all.

Congressman Miller expressed himself in favor of the government paying for this service before this bill was introduced, and he still feels that way about it.

The only objection that has been raised is that it would subsidize the newspapers and thus control their editorial policies. In the first place this would not be so, because the average newspaper editor does not attempt to influence local opinion on national political issues. He is too busy serving his community in local matters such as gathering the news, helping the local merchant with his advertising problems and taking part in every movement for city betterment. He takes care of national matters by carrying articles of one or more nationally known news commentators. If he does not feel the urge to protest or commend, his opinions are no more bound by what advertisers think than are those of any other virile American citizen, by the thoughts of those with whom he does business. It is an insult to an honored and patriotic profession to intimate that its opinions can be bought with an honest payment for services rendered.

It looks as though John L. Lewis has won again. Jimmy Byrnes has relaxed the "Hold the Line" order so the War Labor Board can again "adjust" wages, which means a raise. When Secretary Ickes took over he immediately ordered the mines to work six days a week, that is 48 hours. The miners receive time and a half for all over 35 hours, which means a 30% increase since the war started. Now it looks like there may be a further "adjustment" upward.

There is an old saying to the effect that you never miss the water 'till the well runs dry. We might change that to read "till the pump breaks down. It has been extremely difficult for farmers and ranchers to get windmill and pump repairs, so some of them may well miss the water. There are some things that livestock can do without, but water is not one of them. Last winter questionnaires were sent out to thousands of farmers asking what agricultural greatest handicap might be. Some 89% came back with the answer, "Too much interference from Washington." Thomas Jefferson, himself a farmer, said over a century and a half ago, "Were we directed from Washington when to sow and when to reap, the people would soon want bread."

Persistent efforts on the part of the Nebraska delegation, working with WPB, has resulted in that agency releasing certain materials through a simplified procedure in order that farmers may get some essential farm equipment. Some of these things are barbed wire, chains, forks and scoops, poultry netting, staples, horse collars, pipe and fittings, telephone and radio batteries. They will come from temporary diversions from the Army, Navy and Lend-Lease. Farmers in need of these items should place their orders at once with their dealer so he can in turn order them from his distributor if he does not have them in stock.

The Navy Appropriation Bill is being considered as this is being written. It is for 29 billion dollars. Since the start of this war the Navy has been given approximately 93 billion dollars. However, if this money will shorten the war by even one day it seems
