Popular Songs to be Used as Themes for Scenarios

JULIA SHAWELL
Are you thinking of me to-night? — Tho' we've drifted apart, Am I still in your heart

Famous Motion Picture Critic Presents New Idea

New York City.—The importance of a popular song as the musical theme for a motion picture is emphasized by Julia V. Shawell, who under the name of Betty Colfax is motion picture critic of the New York Evening Graphic, the paper that received the highest metropolitan rating for its movie criticisms. "A song hit associated with a film is just as effective as a musical hit in a Broadway revue or operetta," Miss Shawell declares. "The time will come when a cinema producer will consider the special and creative musical accompaniment of his film as essential as good timing. "And the next step will be that of writing motion pictures around popular hits as themes. Indeed, I have a song to suggest to some producer. It is, 'Are You Thinking of Me Tonight?' which tells a complete story and would make a corking scenario. "Songs and movies are so closely connected that they are similar in their purpose and effect. In a season when intense love plots prove most popular with screen audiences, the same taste is shown in songs which make a hit. In an era when happy comedy or light romance prevails on the screen, the situation is the same over the counter where sheet music is sold. "Whether songs and pictures create a public sentiment or whether they reflect it, they are two of the most important and best known mediums of public impression and mass expression."
