THOUGHT.

By Shobert Edwards.

"There are two kinds of thought, new thought and second hand thought. New thought is made up of thoughts you yourself think. This is supplied to you by others." You are always thinking when you are awake although I have heard teachers say that they believed all that the students were thinking about was a way to kill time. New thoughts are the best if they are good. You should not depend on someone else to do your thinking for you because it is not always what you want, and thinking is a tool that grows keener with use.

Did you ever stop to think why men are superior to other animals? Why they can build skyscrapers, railroads, cars, airplanes? Why they make fires, cook, eat and live as we do? No? It is because we have the power to think. Some have more power to think than others. That is why there are rich men and poor men. "What about the man who inherits wealth?" you say. Well, someone had to think to amass the fortune. Now the heirs must "think" to keep it. "If someone supplies a thought you may remember it or you may not. But if I can make you think a thought for yourself, I have indeed added to your knowledge."

N. B. Shobert's quotations are from Elbert Hubbard's Note Book. Read his notes on "thought." They are fully worth while.

THE CHILDREN IN THE HOME.

They are idols of hearts and of households; They are angels of God in disguise; His sunlight still sleeps in their tresses; His glory still gleams in their eyes; Oh, those truant from home and from heaven; They have made me more manly and mild, And I know now how Jesus could liken The kingdom of God to a child. —Dickens.

OUR RED CROSS NURSE.

"You've heard of the man from Dundee, Who always put sand in his tea, He received a shock, When he found a rock, Had formed on the inside of his head." "Ah me, ah me; How did it happen," said he, "said he, "How did it happen to be?"

Few things come with absolutely no warning. At some time the tiny speck is applied to the fuse; very little or nothing is done to extinguish it. On and on it goes until one day it leads to the powder, which explodes. Amidst the wreckage we exclaim, "How did it ever happen? I never dreamed of such a thing." Thunderbolts do not come from a clear sky; they come from unobserved clouds. This is true not only in nature, but also in the realm of human events. The suddenness of an occurrence is only the measure of our own carelessness in observation. The surface events often seem as bolts from the blue sky only because their origin have not been visible. From, Byways to Health. The school inspection is discovering many of these hitherto unnoticed defects. How are you responding? Will you wait until the powder is reached and the explosion occurs?

Many of the pupils are found with habits that will definitely hamper their best development. Are you parents helping your children to correct their poor habits of eating, sleeping, standing, etc?

Good health is one of life's greatest blessings and to help children grow into healthy adults is worth time and effort.

HOME ECONOMICS.

By Elizabeth Henry.

"The Lunch Box." The lunch carried from home requires thought in planning so that it will be satisfying, nutritious, and appetizing. The container used plays a large part in keeping the lunch in good condition.

Vegetable salad, such as potato salad, Boston baked beans and potato chips, add variety to the lunch of the adult, but are not suitable for the children's meal away from home.

"Sandwich Fillings."

Left over meat, mixed, with cream or salad dressing. Sliced cheese with salad dressing or mustard on rye bread. Jams and jellies. Ripe bananas mixed with chopped peanuts or peanut butter. Mixed pickle, sour or sweet, with chopped egg.

The following menu will be served the week of February 4 to February 8. Monday Macaroni and Cheese Tuesday Creamed Lima Beans Wednesday Hot Chocolate Thursday Scalloped Potatoes Friday Tomato Soup Laboratory— Manager Helen Hancock Proctor Marvel Effle Cooks Opal McKim, Effie Madison.

ENGLISH 10.

The English 10 classes have been reading the "Tale of Two Cities" by Charles Dickens. It is a mystery story of the time just before the French Revolution and its value is greatly increased by the personality and style of the writer, for Dickens puts in many slight details which point out the plot but do not tell what, when, or where the climax is, and serve to awaken a lively interest and suspense in the readers. And to it all he added a sense of humor that makes the book a masterpiece of the English literature.

EIGHTH GRADE.

Mary Sparks received a Student's Final Certificate from the Palmer School of Penmanship. Mike Madura received a Progress Pin, while the other members of the class earned Palmer Buttons. The pupils are very proud of their rewards.

The class is enjoying some very useful booklets entitled, "365 Facts about Omaha and Nebraska" which were secured from the Omaha Chamber of Commerce. These are used in connection with the work on the Geography of Nebraska.

The drawing period last week was devoted to designing covers for music booklets. Several of the designs were very unique and original and were commended by their music supervisor, Miss Turner.

GRADE ITEMS.

Second Grade The second grade was very sorry to lose one of their pupils last week which was Robert Persons.

Third Grade The third grade is glad to welcome a new pupil, Phyllis Lidell.

Seventh Grade Last Thursday everyone received 100 per cent in spelling. The seventh grade is studying the World's Industries consisting of wheat, corn and cotton.

WAKING UP YOUR MIND.

Not long ago I was talking to a man who writes newspaper paragraphs—short, pointed commentaries on the day's news.

To this kind of writing he has devoted his life, and has made almost an international reputation.

"Being naturally interested in any kind of writing, I asked him how he had come to take up this department, how much time he spent on it, and whether or not he enjoyed it.

"I would rather do it than anything else," he said, "and all a man can ask of this life is to prefer his own business to any other form of activity. "I have been doing it since I was 25 years old. It is just as hard for me now as it was then.

"But I have learned one thing about it. And that is that to write paragraphs and I suppose the same thing holds true of every kind of writing—one must get wide awake.

"I begin my day's work by writing six or seven paragraphs, knowing that I shall have to throw them all away. "Pretty soon, perhaps in an hour, I write one that I think is good. I throw that away, too, for I am not quite sure that I am right about it.

"But the one I write after that will usually do for print. And the next seven or eight have something to say, and enough "kick" in them to pass me. If they pass me, they usually pass my editor.

"It took me four of five years to discover that you never wake up your mind till you have been using it for quite a while, and using it for all it is worth.

"A well known inventor told me one time that when he went to work in his laboratory he didn't expect to do anything new till he had been there for four or five hours concentrating on some job or other.

"At the end of that time he said his brain was awake, and then he could begin to do something that was constructive."

I suppose that this man's experience is the same as that of every person who produces work that is really worth while.

The brain appears to get roused—to get its second wind—so to speak—after it has been actively functioning for a long period, and not until then.

The stories you hear about inspirations are largely fairy stories. Inspiration comes often to men who know how to use their brains at top capacity, and keep them working till they are alert and concentrated on their jobs.

Nobody can do anything really important on the spur of the moment.

The well known wits who seem to say brilliant things suddenly have probably been saving up those brilliant things until the occasion for their use came along.

The mind is like the body, in that it can not put forth its supreme effort till it has done a little practicing—warming up—as they say in athletics.
