

Acidity

The common cause of digestive difficulties is excess acid. Soda cannot alter this condition, and it burns the stomach. Something that will neutralize the acidity is the sensible thing to take. That is why physicians tell the public to use Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this delightful preparation can neutralize many times its volume in acid. It acts instantly; relief is quick, and very apparent. All gas is dispelled; all sourness is soon gone; the whole system is sweetened. Do try this perfect anti-acid, and remember it is just as good for children, too, and pleasant for them to take.

Any drug store has the genuine, prescriptional product.

Solution

A woman driver ran into an embankment and bent a fender. It worried her. So she went to a garage and asked the mechanic:

"Can you fix this fender so my husband won't know it was bent?"

The mechanic looked at the bent fender and then at her and said:

"No, lady, I can't. But I tell you what I can do. I can fix it up so that in a few days you can ask your husband how he bent it."—Life.

IT'S DANGEROUS GROUND

You stand on—with a cough, a cold or gripe, and your blood impoverished. You must do something! Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery enriches the blood, builds health and strength.

Silas H. Edison, Route 5, Box 4, St. John, Kans., remarked: "I have used Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, 'Anuric Tablets' and 'Pleasant Pellets' and surely can say that they have done wonders for me. I had whooping cough and pneumonia when I was 19 years and was troubled ever since with indigestion, constipation and kidney trouble. I tried doctors but did not get relief. I had given up all hopes, but thank God I saw a well man today. I certainly can recommend Dr. Pierce's medicines to be all that is claimed for them."

All druggists. Tablets or fluid. Send Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 100. You desire a trial pkg. of tablets.

His Lucky Day

D. L. Davis of Fresno, Calif., is noted as a good marksman with a shotgun. He seldom wastes a shell. But Davis surprised even himself the other day when he brought down a rabbit and a quail with one shot. Just as he raised his gun to fire at a rabbit a quail flew into range of the scattering lead pellets and both animal and bird were killed.

"WORTH WEIGHT IN GOLD"

Verdict of Woman Who Tried Pinkham's Compound

Tully, N. Y.—"It hurt me to walk or sit down without help and I felt sick and weak. My mother-in-law took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and she induced me to take it. I am now on the fourth bottle and have also used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. The medicines that will do for me what the Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash have done are certainly worth their weight in gold. I think I have given them a fair trial and I expect to take two more bottles of the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. CHARLES MORGAN, R. F. D. 1, Tully, N. Y.

Out Our Way

Tinkham's Inquiry Reminds That Custom Is Stronger Than Constitutional Rules or Statutory Enactments

From the Cedar Rapids Gazette.

The Fourteenth amendment to the constitution makes negroes citizens of the United States and provides that representation shall be reduced in proportion to existing disfranchisement in any state. The Fifteenth amendment prohibits discrimination against citizens in bestowal of suffrage rights because of race, color or previous condition of servitude.

As every one knows, the south has through use of intimidation and various legislative shifts virtually nullified the spirit and intent of both amendments. Representative Tinkham, a zealous wet, seeks to embarrass Mr. Hoover by calling this well known situation to the president's attention and demanding enforcement of the flouted amendments. To clinch his demand, Mr. Tinkham quotes an excerpt from the inaugural address:

"Our whole system of government will crumble either if officials elect what laws they will enforce or citizens elect what laws they will support."

Mr. Tinkham is making the point, of course, that Mr. Hoover, under his oath, is obligated to enforce the Fourteenth and Fifteenth as well as the Eighteenth. No enforcement acts are in effect for the Fourteenth and Fifteenth amendments, however, and public sentiment does not demand an attempt at enforcement.

Immediately after the Civil war the Fourteenth and Fifteenth amendments were quite literally enforced. Federal troops were quartered in the south and negroes voted under the protection of bayonets. Students of history are familiar with the result of the "carpet bag" regime. The amendments had been adopted during war hysteria and as the nation settled into a normal frame of mind it became generally recognized that a people just emerging from servitude was not qualified to be self-governing. The last effort to pass legislation under the Fourteenth and Fifteenth amendments was made in 1890 when the Lodge "force bill" was defeated. The custom of the south was victorious over the theoretical rights of southern negroes as set forth in the constitution.

A Country of Meadows

This is a country of meadows of a noble amplitude, and oak thickets, and sudden, rounded eminences. Southwards broods the long dim rampart of the Downs, taking the huge buffet of the westerly gales, keeping the wide and wooded valley in peace.

As the sun falls to the west, garden and field and wood are bathed in a radiance of rose and gold, and the cows wander leisurely, yet with an air of slightly aggrieved dignity, past the shining pond (across which a moorhen flutters to her nest in the sedge) and along the grassy lane, and into the dusty white road, and so home. Beyond the darkling trees the fires of sunset burn with an orange glow. A light shines in the cottage window. Within, a great fire of logs flames and crackles in the wide ingle, ruddily touching the oak beams, and casting black shadows in the corners. Shut door and lattice and draw close about that comfortable blaze. There is no such thing in London.

Primroses of the Sand

After a heavy rain has passed over the semiarid section of the American southwest and the hot sun has come out again, the desert flowers open all over the moist land. The loveliness of these early blossoms is so unexpected in the brown wastes, the contrast so marked between vivid petals and bare, dark ground, that painters and travelers journey far to behold the vision. Among the most beautiful of these unexpected, far flung gardens are the great beds of evening primrose. Early the next morning a noise of tapping sounds in the silent house. What is it? There is no one at the door. Looking from the window, one beholds the sky white and clear, the fields glittering with frost and solitary, the garden all sparkling white and empty. Still the tapping. It is a goldfinch, perched on the ledge of the glazed panel in the door, tapping the glass with his beak. As the door is open, if he wished to enter, he could enter; but he is a perfect little gentleman. Presently he flies away and sits in the apple-tree, waiting for breakfast.

Another day of sun. The wood, from which they have cleared the undergrowth, is floored with red leaves and vivid moss, and bright prim-roses. A rabbit strolls from his cavern in the bank, and sits very still, and presently remembers an engagement and hastens away, with his rocking-horse gait, to keep it.—L. Cope Cornford, in "Interpretations."

People of the Twilight

From Diamond Jenness. The Eskimo has changed since 1916. Even while we said our farewells the traders were all heading eastward to the new land of beautiful white fox skins. White men have invaded it from every quarter and the twilight of ignorance and superstition is yielding to the dawn of a greater knowledge. Bows and arrows have passed with other weapons into the darkness of the past and a new mechanical age has brought magazine rifles, shotguns, steel traps and even gasoline engines. The caribou are passing with the bows and arrows, of all the herds that once crossed the straits to Victoria Island hardly one now reaches the arctic shore. Strange diseases are making their appearances, diseases that the old-time Eskimo never heard of and for which he has no name. The stern laws of civilization have descended on the land; no longer is infanticide tolerated, or the blood feud allowed to run its course. "Furs, furs, more furs" is the white man's cry. The tribal band where each man toiled for all and shared his food in common are resolving into their constituent families and every family vies with the other in the race for wealth and worldly prosperity. Were we the harbingers of a brighter dawn, or only messengers of ill omen, portending disaster?

pale green foliage, reddish, tightly rolled buds, and white ethereal blossoms that makes this flower display one of the most effective in the desert. There is such dainty appealing beauty about a primrose. The wide-spread flower has the texture of crinkled silk, and often the petals are over three inches wide. Its fragrance is far reaching, and night-flying moths and beetling loving insects converge upon it from every direction. As one journeys over the desert in late winter or early spring the sight of beds of primroses spilled over the glowing sand is like a glimpse into fairyland.

Rays to Bring Death to Harmful Bacteria

An invisible electric death ray has been discovered by a German physicist. The apparatus is fitted with valves like those used in an ordinary radio set, of so small a size that it will fit in a cigar box, with which he could send out ultra-short waves of a length less than three metres.

These waves will kill instantaneous germs, insects, and even small animals which come within their reach.

"My assistant and I," said the inventor, "are now engaged in perfecting the apparatus."

"Our death wave is not dangerous to living beings apart from those which come within its carefully limited sphere of action. Flies and insects which pass across this field drop dead. Mice are killed in a few seconds. Rats are dead within three to five minutes."

"If we succeed in perfecting our apparatus we shall be in a position, without in any way injuring the tissue of the human body, to kill disease-causing bacteria within the human body."

To Make It Pull Albert D. Lasker, former head of the shipping board, is a very successful advertising man, and at a luncheon at Chicago he gave some good advice to young copy advertisement writers.

"Write pulling copy," he said, "but in your desire to make it pull don't make it absurd or incredible. Some young writers do."

"Yes, some of the advertisements that are submitted to me recall the lawyer who put a notice on his door: 'Out to lunch. Back in an hour.'"

"He was a struggling young lawyer, and he didn't want to lose any clients who might turn up in his absence; so he added to the notice: 'Been gone 50 minutes already.'"

Talking Mountains Found Undersea mountains that just could not keep silent, have yielded their secret to the persistent scientists. By firing detonating shells from a brass shotgun and determining the time the echoes took to return from the floor of the sea, scientists on the non-magnetic yacht Carnegie found two new ranges of mountains. One is more than a mile high above the sea floor near Ecuador. The other rises 9,750 feet, about 400 miles north of Juan Fernandez island. This range may be a contributing cause to the Humboldt current, and may also be the remnant of a sunken land whence sprang the mysterious Easter Island civilization.

Inanimate Contidant

A New Yorker who went to be psychoanalyzed was unable to co-operate fully in the diagnosis of his mental obstacles because he could not remember his dreams. They grew vague or escaped him entirely by the time he made his daily visit to the expert.

He has solved the problem. A dictaphone now stands beside his bed, and every morning on awaking he finds the memory of his subconscious mental wanderings fresh enough to re-ate them to the machine. Then he makes a transcript for the psychoanalyst and smashes the wax cylinders.

Cattle and Airships Have Close Relation

In the construction of two new dirigibles the United States will have to sacrifice 1,500,000 cattle.

The part the cattle take in the construction of the most modern form of transportation through furnishing the "gold-beaters' skin" for the airship forms a new chapter in the romance of industry.

"Gold-beaters' skin" is nothing more or less than a small tough section in the intestine of a steer. It got this name from the Middle ages, when goldsmiths discovered that by putting gold between two strips of this skin they could hammer it for days, making the finest gold leaf without tearing the skin.

Its great strength, along with its lightness of texture, and the further fact that it permitted less diffusion of gas than any other known substance, recommended it for balloon work. This was tried in England before and during the World war and proved successful.
