TRUE PUBLIC OWNERSHIP

OWNERSHIP of our public utility enterprises is not held by a few individuals. The electric power industry has been a pioneer in permitting the small investor to enjoy the benefits formerly reserved for the capitalist. Today public service companies are rapidly becoming great community enterprises owned by the employees, customers and general public, who have thus invested their savings.

This is true "Public Ownership," but without the evils of "Political Operation."

"I'll Call Him by 'Long Distance' Instead of Writing"

"Long Distance" has a personal appeal that no letter can convey. It is like being there in person.

You can talk with loved ones over the long distance telephone, whether separated from them by only a few miles, or by hundreds.

Just ask for "Long Distance," give her your call and soon you will be talking.

THE C. B. & Q. REPLACING SNOW FENCES WITH TREES

The C. B. & Q. have planted about 40,000 trees along their right-of-way in Nebraska this year which, in a few years, will replace the snow fences now being used along the cuts and curves of their roadway.

According to L. E. Downey, the local station agent, about 5,000 trees have been planted between O'Neill and McLean this year, about 700 of the number was set out at Hay Point. The trees are planted in three rows; two of the rows consist of a hedge shrub of trees placed about one foot apart and the third row is a large tree placed about six feet apart. The company sent an agronomist over the lines to determine the nature of the soil and the kinds of trees that would do the best in the different localities. About six kinds of trees are being used, among the number will be found the elm, Mulberry, Russian olive and pine. The company is also beautifying their grounds adjacent to the depots; the O'Neill properties will not be reached this year, perhaps, but if present plans continue we may have a park and some flowers and shrubbery on the O'Neill end of the line.
