The weather man has been treating this locality to rather cool weather during the past couple of weeks, in fact we have enjoyed only a few warm days this spring. The one redeeming feature is the moisture we have been receiving. Last week there was .27 of an inch and again Sunday .68 of an inch. The ground is in fine condition for farming; the farmers say that the small grain and hay are doing nicely.

Lillian comes from the largest Rural School in Holt County, having an enrollment of thirty-six pupils. Although Lillian was not a winner in the contest she made a fine showing for Holt County. Fifty three contestants were entered. Lillian remained in line for three hours and went down on the word "annihilate," eighteen from the last. She was one of the three smallest and one of the youngest contestants.

The rules regulating the contest were very strict. They had only one chance to spell a word and after once starting to spell a word they could not start over.

Each contestant was given a silver medal by the World Herald as a champion in the county from which they came. Group pictures of all contestants were taken.

They are a strong incentive for the children to become interested in club work.

Activity in Congress this week has been largely confined to the Senate, so far as the meeting of the two Houses is concerned. The promised tariff bill is not yet reported from the House Committee, although it is expected on Monday. The House had planned to consider, this week, several bills such as the oleo or butter substitute bill and others, but the leaders feared that their passage now would complicate an already complicated situation in the Senate, so those matters were postponed.

The Senate has been actively considering the farm bill, with the Export Debenture plan the bone of contention. It is expected that that will be acted upon and probably the bill passed by the Senate during the coming week.

The House has not organized for the passage of general legislation. I feel that it should have, so that the Committee could give more time to study of proposed laws than they are ordinarily able to give during the regular sessions. The following summary, quoted from the Washington Star, may be of interest, bearing on the volume of work that is done in a session of Congress:

WASHINGTON, D. C., LETTER.

Most of the people throughout the country do not seem to realize as yet how different this session of Congress is from the usual session. This extraordinary session is called for the purpose of passing just two bills—farm relief and tariff. Compared with that goal of two laws, the last (Seventieth Congress put 1722 laws on the statute books, the preceding (Sixty-ninth) Congress passed 1423, and the Congress before that 996. In the present session only four committees are organized and only two of them have bills referred to them, whereas the usual session has all committees at work. For example, in the Seventieth Congress there were 17,334 bills introduced, 435 joint resolutions, 351 simple resolutions and 60 House concurrent resolutions, making a total of 18,180 bills and resolutions considered by committees. During the Seventieth Congress the House passed 1584 House bills and resolutions and 736 Senate bills and resolutions. The House passed 559 House bills, 20 joint resolutions and 19 Senate bills and joint resolutions which did not become laws. There were introduced in the Senate 5,903 bills, 224 joint resolutions, 38 concurrent resolutions and 351 simple resolutions. The Senate passed 941 bills and 72 joint resolutions. The Senate committee made 2,074 reports. The Senate passed 301 bills and resolutions which did not become law. Of the 945 House bills which became laws there were included eight omnibus pension bills, which, added to one Senate omnibus pension bill, contained 7,620 private bills which were enacted. This made the grand total of laws, including those enacted in omnibus pension bills, 9,333. The President transmitted to the House 103 messages in the last Congress, executive departments transmitted 876 communications.
