NO OPEN SEASON ON PRAIRIE CHICKENS

(Norfolk News.)
Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 23—A word of warning went out yesterday to Nebraska sportsmen in advance of the hunting season.

Contrary to belief in certain quarters, Frank O'Connell, state game warden, asserted there will be no open season this fall for shooting either prairie chickens of grouse.

Nor will the season be opened again until October 15, 1931, and will only be open on each uneven year thereafter in compliance with recently revised game laws.

Heretofore, O'Connell explained, the season for hunting these birds has been each fall from October 1 to November 1, but now a penalty of a $25.00 fine and $10.00 damages for each bird shot awaits hunters who ignore the law.

Warden O'Connell also announced today that instead of a more extended field of operations for hunters of pheasant this fall, the territory may be more limited than last year.

Of nine counties which permitted this hunting last year, but one, Valley, has indicated a willingness to open the season this fall. Four other counties, however, Nance, Morrill, Knox and Boone, may be opened, he said.

"MUST CUT THE WEEDS," SAYS CHIEF OF POLICE

Chief of Police, Scott Hough, is authority for the statement that the weeds along the streets of O'Neill must be cut or they will be cut by the City and the costs charged to the property owners. Weeds along the city streets must also be cut at once.

The County Fair will start one of these days in the near future and we want our city to make a creditable appearance at that time. Streets that are filled with weeds are not indicative of progress.

Let's get rid of the weeds and make a better impression on the traveling public.
