

It's all right to pull 'em if they're old

"I tell you, I love fine machinery. And how I hate to 'pull' a motor like this that ought to be ready for another 10,000 miles. It just don't seem right.

"When they're old, and have served their time, I like to work with 'em. But if everyone would use this new Tagolene, we wouldn't have any trouble like this. That's what you ought to use —Tagolene."

The New Tagolene

makes a strong appeal to the pocketbook of the car owner. It gives added miles of wear. The repairman will not be needed until your car has given tens of thousands of miles of wear. And add to all this the confidence you may have that all goes well under the hood, whether you're going thirty or eighty.
