WALTER P. CHRYSLER'S TRAFFIC TALKS

CROSS ROADS

In the old days of horse driven vehicles there was plenty of time to see the signs when you came to the cross roads. The horse and buggy could draw up to the most prominent position and study the signs to the heart's content of the driver.

But those days are over. Cross roads are now danger points to the motorist to be approached with care and a rigid adherence to the law. The silent policeman far out in the country at the cross roads should be as greatly respected by the motorist as the live policeman on the city street crossing.

Caution signs should be obeyed. The flashing light which warns of the intersection should always be a signal to slow down in speed and should never be ignored by the

When the necessity for looking at the road signs presents itself the stop should be made with every thought for the safety of all concerned. The car should be drawn up on the right side of the road and the motorist should alight and inspect the signs on foot. Do not drive up to the signs and engineer to place your car so that you can read them from the driver's seat, regardless of the oncoming traffic. A flashlight should be in good working condition in every car. The motorist can not depend on making a stop at night which will bring his lights to bear on the signs. The old days are gone. Safety is the keynote for the modern traveler in a modern world. Cross roads should call out the instant response, "safety first" in the mind of the operator of every motor vehicle.

:ANTIQUE FURNITURE IN "MODERN":

Furniture needs not to be really old to create "the atmosphere" familiar to our Colonial forebears. A striking example of the successful use of modern antiques is found in the new dining room recently installed as adjunct to the model kitchen in the plant of Libby, NcNeil and Libby in Chicago. Ceilings are beamed, floors patched, casement windows leaded exactly as they used to be when great-grandmother was a slip of a girl. However, the Yorkshire rush bottom chairs, trestle table, quaint Welsh dresser but simulate age. Artistic as is this dining room it serves a thoroughly practical purpose. Around its trestle table to guests of discriminating taste are served the delectable dishes which Mary Hale Martin, home economics expert concocts. (Herbert Photos, New York)

'TWO OF WORLD'S COSTLIEST FOUNTS'

The luxury and beauty of the 18th century Court of the French Kings at Versailles has never been equalled by any other nation or dynasty. Architects, Landscape Gardeners, Painters and Decorators had only to visualize their most elaborate dreams to the Bourbon's of the 18th century in order to have the public coffers of France open to them that their dreams might become palaces in fact—playgrounds of unheard of beauty for the whims of the King's favorites. The beautiful fountains at Versailles, shown above, built by Louis XIV of France for the amusement of his notoriously extravagant Court are the most famous, but not the most expensive nor the most extravagant of fountain displays in the world: that unfortunate distinction is reserved for the fountains created by the carelessness of the American motorists who maintain their fountain display all winter; whereas the French Republic feels it can afford to display the gorgeous jets at Versailles but a few minutes each year, Many owners of expensive as well as moderate priced cars pay little or no attention to those simple rules which if followed regularly will repay them many fold in the added pleasure derived from the performance of their motors. Common sense should tell us that machinery of any kind, especially that found in any make of motor car needs some sort of attention. The careless American motorist could save himself millions of dollars yearly if he would put denatured alcohol in his radiator before the first freezing weather and keep his radiator with a high enough percentage of denatured alcohol to avoid freezing all winter. It is estimated that $2,500,000 is expended on repairing the havoc wrought by radiators frozen and clogged with inferior anti-freeze mixtures, while ten per cent of that amount spent on "Freezing Insurance" in the form of denatured alcohol would have saved this needless outlay. (Herbert Photos, N. Y.)
