A hail storm visited this vicinity Monday, about 5 o'clock p. m.; the most damage that was done was broken window lights and some chickens and a few pigs were killed. Some of the hail stones which were measured after lying out in the rain for some time measured 7 1/2 inches in circumference; had there been much wind, the damage would have been much greater. Later reports of the hailstorm on Monday are that Theodore Crawford, who was listing corn, tried to unhitch his horses, but they broke away from him; he was bruised up some and the lister was broken; the hail struck his brother, Lawrence, knocking him down.
