MEXICAN CHIEF LIVES IN EXILE

General Francisco Robles Manzo Loses Fortune, Retains Health

BY DENNIS LANDRY, United Press Correspondent. Tucson, Ariz. — (UP) — There resides in this border town a rancher who has a good idea of how Napoleon felt when he was banished to St. Helena to ponder the vicissitudes of war.

He is the former Gen. Francisco Robles Manzo, 260-pound ex-under-secretary of war of Mexico, commander of Sonora and the conqueror of the Yaquis. Today, he is a political refugee from his native country.

In the 1929 Escobar rebellion, General Manzo served as commander of all rebel forces in northwestern Mexico. With the defeat of his army by the federales, he was driven across the international boundary, leaving behind him a fortune accumulated after years of labor in his home at Ortiz, Sonora, Mexico.

Despite his comparatively low estate here, the once noted military leader may look across the boundary of his mother country to a number of economic achievements which will stand as monuments in Ortiz to his enterprise. In making his escape, he left behind 5,600 head of cattle, a $25,000 light and power system, a modern water works which he founded, extensive ranching interests, some 200 miles of improved highways in and adjacent to Ortiz, and modern barracks housing some 2,000 soldiers whom he commanded.

"Whatever glory that was once mine was wiped out in a moment," he said, smiling sadly. "But I still have my wife and four children and I am a good rancher—so perhaps I should not be despondent. There still may be brighter days ahead."

And the once highly honored federal officer, clad now in dungarees, goes about in any other Mexican laborer. And occasionally from his lips sound Mexican National anthems he loves so well. Incidentally, one of General Manzo's favorite historic characters is Napoleon.

May Reopen Exclusion.

From Philadelphia Public Ledger. The well-defined but quiet efforts being made in this country to reopen the Japanese-exclusion issue are creating much interest in Japan. It is the only question which prevents a full measure of amity from prevailing between the two countries and it vitiate Japanese-American relations at every turn. The state department is every day opposed to the work in mind and would be considerably gratified to see it removed.

Assistant Secretary of State Castle recently gave out a press interview on the question. It will be remembered that he acted as special ambassador to Japan during the London naval conference and that a public appeal was made to him at his farewell dinner in Tokio to exert his influence to clear up the matter. The Japanese spokesman on this occasion was Mr. Hamana, ambassador to Washington at the time the exclusion law was passed and his diplomatic career wrecked.

When the question was called to the attention of Representative Albert Johnson, chairman of the House immigration committee, he asserted that he had in mind an amendment to the law which would put Japanese citizens under the quota system. But apparently Mr. Johnson does not intend to move for revision of the clause which confines immigration to those aliens who are qualified to become American citizens. So his proposal would apply the quota only to those Japanese subjects who belong to the Caucasian or African Negro races.

If this is as far as Mr. Johnson is ready to go, the Japanese will remain entirely unsatisfied. What they want is removal of the discrimination which puts them in the category of backward peoples. They do not care how small their quota is. Opposition in Pacific coast states to any change in the law will probably prevent a satisfactory adjustment in the near future. But if the sense of justice of the American people could prevail, the greatest possible step toward insuring peace in the Pacific would be taken without delay. Satisfying Japan on this issue would be a measure of moral disarmament of incalculable value.

One of Oldest Legends, That of Wandering Jew

How long the story of the "Wandering Jew" has been in circulation, and what was its origin, are questions on which there is no evidence to base replies. But it is certain that from the period of its first writing it became more prevalent than ever in various homes.

It was not till after that the aspect of eternal wandering was introduced, and this was possibly encouraged by the fact that at intervals persons claiming to be the original "Wandering Jew" made their appearance in different parts of Europe.

According to the Italian astrologer Guido Bonatti, the wanderer passed through Forlì in 1267. Philip of Novara, a famous jurist who resided for a long time in Jerusalem, writing in 1250, refers to one Jehan Boute Dieu as one proverbially long-lived, suggesting that the legend was then well established in Jerusalem.

FLAME SPEED GOVERNS MOTOR POWER

"A DISTINCTLY FINER GASOLINE"

Uniform flame speed develops power for the full length of the piston stroke. This explains the extra power your motor produces with new Red Crown Ethyl.

This distinctly finer gasoline burns evenly and assures full engine speed. It gives most power when you need it most—when the going is hardest.

You take hills easily without shifting gears. There's more flexible power at slow road speeds—more power at all speeds and all loads when you step on the gas. Never a gas knock—quieter power and plenty of it.

New Red Crown Ethyl gives low gas cost per mile. It is a luxury, but not an extravagance. At Red Crown Service Stations and Dealers everywhere in Nebraska.
