

"In plain blunt words, Bill, your pipe smells like a 'Hot-Box'!"

ONLY an old and trusted friend would venture to speak so frankly. A new pipe, or an old one carefully broken in with Sir Walter Raleigh's favorite smoking mixture, changes everything. And why shouldn't it? Sir Walter is milder and more fragrant. And it has the body and flavor found only in the finest of Burley, skillfully seasoned and blended. What more could we offer any pipe smoker? What more could he ask?

FARM BOARD TO SPREAD GOSPEL

Emphasis on Work of Body to Feature Instruction in Woodbury County

Washington — Special emphasis upon the work of the Federal Farm board will feature Woodbury county agricultural instruction this winter, plans for which will be discussed with officials of the farm board and the board for vocational education at a conference in Chicago in November.

In making this announcement, Dr. C. H. Lane, chief of the agricultural instruction division of the latter board, said that his group is not attempting to spread propaganda favorable to the farm. The aim "is to show what the board can do as well as what it can do," he said.

This marks the second project which the farm board will use this year in its effort to spread its gospel. The other is the extension service of the agricultural department.

The Iowa work is under direction of State Supervisors George F. Ekstrom and Hampton T. Hall of Des Moines, who are expected to attend the Chicago gathering. A number of high schools in Woodbury and neighboring counties are using federal funds available under the Smith-Hughes act, together with corresponding amounts furnished by the state in including agricultural instruction in their regular courses.

The schools will try to expand their night classes for adults this winter, as part of the effort to show how the farm board can assist farmers. In each case the teacher of the agricultural course will be furnished every federal aid which can be used to give the Iowa farmer useful information, Dr. Lane said.

How Bees Talk.

From New York Times.
Bees have been studied for centuries and one would think that new facts about them would be hard to discover. But recent researches by Prof. Von Frisch, director of the zoological institute of the University of Munich, have led to the discovery that bees communicate with each other by dancing.

When Prof. Von Frisch needs bees for experimental purposes, he puts out some sheets of paper coated with honey. He may have to wait hours or days for a single bee to come but as soon as one has found the feeding place, hundreds may appear within a short time all from the same hive. The discoverer must have told the others, but how?

In order to clear up the mystery Von Frisch had to construct special observation hives, with glass windows and a new arrangement of the combs which enabled him to watch the bees. Every bee had to be numbered and Von Frisch managed to devise a handy code by painting the bees in five colors. Bees were numbered up to 599 and Von Frisch could readily distinguish them while in flight.

The first bee to discover honey was marked and observed upon its return to the hive. First it delivered the provender to the other bees in the hive. Then it began to dance. For one full minute it twisted itself to right and left alternately, then repeated the dance on another spot. The dance ended as suddenly as it had begun. The dancing bee hurried to the exit and returned to the feeding place.

The other bees on the wax comb were noticed to be very much excited by this dance. They closely followed its every twist and turn to the dancer's body as possible, and evinced great interest. One by one they cleared their wings and antennae and left the hive.

Soon afterward these bees also appeared at the feeding place. Upon returning to the hive they danced in their turn and soon a veritable swarm appeared for honey. Obviously the first bee danced a message to the others.

THE OLD VICTROLA.

Last night I turned the radio from Frisco to St. Paul; Came jazz and ads and bed-time tales.
And that was really all.

I wound the old victrola next, And through the room there rolled The liquid tones of Alma Gluck, Caruso's notes of gold.

The radio gives pointers on Tooth paste and coca-cola, But when I want real music, folks, I wind the old victrola.

Q. What is the cost of citizenship papers in England? What length of residence is required? M. W. P.

A. The naturalization laws of Great Britain provide that in order to be eligible, an alien must during the 8 years preceding his application have resided for not less than 5 years in his majesty's dominions of which not less than 1 year immediately preceding the application must have been spent in the United Kingdom. The fee, payable to the home office, is fixed by the government of the day and is generally about 10 pounds, of which one pound is payable on submission of the application and the remainder on the granting of the certificate.

Q. What accounts for the direction in which the Gulf Stream flows? F. A. B.

A. The course of the Gulf Stream is influenced to a large extent by the coastline. After leaving the Gulf of Mexico it encounters the Bahama Islands and is turned northward, following the trend of the American coast. On issuing into the ocean it is met by the so-called "cold wall" which crowds in towards the New England coast, forcing the Gulf Stream water off toward the east. Being forced farther and farther from the coast it is spread into a fan-shaped drift of continually diminishing depth.

MEXICAN CHIEF LIVES IN EXILE

General Francisco Robles Manzo Loses Fortune, Retains Landry

By DENNIS LANDRY, United Press Correspondent, Tucson, Ariz. — (UP) — There resides in this border town a rancher who has a good idea of how Napoleon felt when he was banished to St. Helena to ponder the vicissitudes of war.

He is the former Gen. Francisco Robles Manzo, 360-pound ex-under-secretary of war of Mexico, commander of Sonora and the conqueror of the Yaquis. Today, he is a political refugee from his native country.

In the 1929 Escobar rebellion, General Manzo served as commander of all rebel forces in northwestern Mexico. With the defeat of his army by the federals, he was driven across the international boundary, leaving behind him a fortune accumulated after years of labor in his home at Ortiz, Sonora, Mexico.

Despite his comparatively low estate here, the once noted military leader may look across the boundary of his mother country to a number of economic achievements which will stand as monuments in Ortiz to his enterprise. In making his escape, he left behind 5,600 head of cattle, a $25,000 light and power system, a modern water works which he founded, extensive ranching interests, some 200 miles of improved highways in and adjacent to Ortiz, and modern barracks housing some 2,000 soldiers whom he commanded.

"What glory that was once mine was wiped out in a moment," he said, smiling sadly. "But I still have my wife and four children and I am a good rancher—so perhaps I still may not be despondent. There still may be brighter days ahead."

And the once highly honored federal officer, clad now in dungarees, goes about his work as any other Mexican laborer. And occasionally from his lips sound Mexican National anthems he loves so well. Incidentally, one of General Manzo's favorite historic characters is Napoleon.

May Reopen Exclusion.

From Philadelphia Public Ledger.

The well-defined but quiet efforts being made in this country to reopen the Japanese-exclusion issue are creating much interest in Japan. It is the only question which prevents a full measure of amity from prevailing between the two countries and it vitiates Japanese-American relations at every turn. The state department has all along been opposed to this immigration ban and would be considerably gratified to see it removed.

Assistant Secretary of State Castle recently gave out a press interview on the question. It will be remembered that he acted as special ambassador to Japan during the London naval conference and that a public appeal was made to him at his farewell dinner in Tokio to exert his influence to clear up the matter. The Japanese spokesman on this occasion was Mr. Hanjirah, ambassador to Washington at the time the exclusion law was passed and his diplomatic career wrecked.

When the question was called to the attention of Representative Albert Johnson, chairman of the House immigration committee, he asserted that he had in mind an amendment to the law which would put Japanese citizens under the quota system. But apparently Mr. Johnson does not intend to move for revision of the clause which confines immigration to those aliens who are qualified to become American citizens. So his proposal would apply the quota only to those Japanese subjects who belong to the Caucasian or African Negro races.

If this is as far as Mr. Johnson is ready to go, the Japanese will remain entirely unsatisfied. What they want is removal of the discrimination which puts them in the category of backward peoples. They do not care how small their quota is. Opposition in Pacific coast states to any change in the law will probably prevent a satisfactory adjustment in the near future. But if the sense of justice of the American people could prevail, the greatest possible step toward insuring peace in the Pacific would be taken without delay. Satisfying Japan on this issue would be a measure of moral disarmament of incalculable value.

RICE STRAW PAPER

Rome, Italy, which has been paying high duties on paper imported from other countries for years, now is establishing an industry to make paper from rice straw. The ministry of agriculture has charge of the exploitation of this industry, and scientists are now at work developing machinery and processes to make fine book paper from the straw.

Q. How many American officers were killed or wounded in action during the World war? A. W. A. Officers killed in action, 1,655; died of wounds received in action, 590; wounded, not mortally, 6,471.

Idea Worked!

Wise mothers find the things that keep children contented, well, happy. Most of them have found they can depend on one thing to restore a youngster's good nature when he's cross, fretful, upset.

The experience of Mrs. Wm. Charleston, 903 Gilmore Ave., Kansas City, Kans., is typical. She says: "I have used California Fig Syrup with Annie and Billy all their lives. Whenever they're constipated or bilious it has them comfortable, happy, in a jiffy. Their wonderful condition proves my idea works."

Physicians endorse the use of pure vegetable California Fig Syrup when bad breath, coated tongue, dullness, feverishness, listlessness, etc., show a child's bowels need help. Weak stomach and bowels are toned by it; a child's appetite and digestion are improved.

The genuine always bears the name California for your protection.

Call for Definition of Still Small Voice

The case of the woman who has advertised for the owner of a gold pin set with small diamonds which she found 25 years ago, is described as one of troubled conscience. Through a quarter of a century the woman must have been stilling the small voice within her that was reminding her that she was keeping something which was not hers and which she was making no effort to return to its owner.

What is this conscience which abides with all human beings and compels us to acts which we do not wish to perform? The dictionary definition is of no help in answering the question. "The knowledge of our own acts and feelings as right or wrong" explains nothing. The difference between right and wrong is so often a personal one, and when a person wishes to justify an act of his to himself it is generally easy. Wrong can be made to appear right to oneself if self-interest is allowed to become paramount. But despite the justification, conscience is never wholly stifled.

It nags and nags at one and gives no peace until, like the woman with the pin, it finally forces what may be called confession. The cynical Talleyrand said that to be happy a man should have a good digestion and no conscience. Possibly, but if it is so, practically no one is truly happy. Conscience may undoubtedly be fostered and what troubles one generation may not trouble another. But conscience is a fixed part of ourselves, something which is born with us. It is of the moral order of the universe, a monitor implanted within us by a Supreme Power.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Wood Produced From Cotton

Synthetic wood produced from compressed and hardened cotton material has been perfected by a Clerkenwell (England) man. It is said to be indistinguishable from mahogany, oak or any other wood, and can be used in making furniture and all kinds of house fixtures. Its cost is much less than ordinary wood and its life will be as long, the inventor says. It may be molded into any shape or thickness and does not warp. It is expected to reduce the cost of houses as well as of furniture.
