GEORGE E. LEE

George E. Lee and his famous broadcasting orchestra will play for a dance at the K. C. Hall on Monday, June 1st, under the direction of Mr. Tom Jordan. Mr. Jordan informs us that this is one of the best bands in the United States and ranks with Duke Ellington's and Paul Whitman's and that if you want to hear a musical treat, don't miss hearing and dancing to this orchestra.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES

The Holt County Eighth Grade Graduation Exercises were held on Friday afternoon of last week at O'Neill. The day was ideal, although warm. The graduates met on the court house lawn at 1 o'clock, where a group picture was taken by the O'Neill Photo Co. Then they marched to the K. C. Hall, led by the Atkinson High School Band. An excellent program was presented by pupils of the graduating class, followed by a very interesting and inspirational address by Judge R. R. Dickson, after which diplomas were presented to the graduates by County Superintendent, Luella A. Parker. An unusually large number of parents and friends of the graduates attended, many more than could be accommodated in the K. C. Hall. Two hundred thirty-nine pupils took and successfully passed the state examinations and of this number all but twenty-seven were present at the exercises to receive their diplomas. At the close of the exercises a special matinee was presented at the Royal Theatre for the graduates. This was a fine show and we wish to thank the O'Neill Lions Club for their co-operation in helping to make this free show possible. Many comments were made during the afternoon regarding the splendid music furnished by the Atkinson High School Band, led by Mr. Atkins. Some members of this band are only sixth grade pupils. The group gives evidence of excellent musical training. Graduates and parents felt that they had spent a very interesting and enjoyable afternoon in spite of the crowded condition of the hall and the warm weather.

A 4-H club was organized in Pleasant Valley district. The first meeting was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Kee on Wednesday, May 5th. The club will meet again on Friday, May 22nd at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jake Ernst.

LOCAL NEWS.

Arthur Tomlinson was quite severely cut and bruised last week when he was run over by a plow. Mrs. A. J. Connerly came from Toronto, Kansas last Saturday for a visit with her brother, H. W. Tomlinson and family. Mrs. Ed Woods came up from Neigh last Thursday for a few days visit with her sister, Mrs. H. W. Tomlinson. Mrs. Woods is moving to Dorsey where she will make her home with her daughter, Mrs. Will Pickering. Mrs. D. H. Clauson moved into her new Beauty Parlor in the Downey building on Wednesday of this week. There is a cozy waiting room neatly decorated and five nicely lighted booths. The effective arrangement makes a very pleasing appearance.

WRITES FROM WASHINGTON

When the warm weather of spring draws near, one of the most pleasing of Washington sports begins to flourish—boating. Many attractive tiny and larger craft which must give great pleasure to many people, are tied up in a side channel of the Potomac. Last week, we were fortunate as to have a two days' trip on one of these, and especially so, to have beautiful weather for it, in a cold and rainy season. Not only is there the pleasure of the boat ride, but from the beginning there is much to see. Pulling out, on the right, is Haines' Point, that parkway bordered by the beautiful double Japanese cherry blossoms. It was, originally, Potomac River, built up into a valuable recreational center. On the left, is Army War College. Behind are the Capitol and the Washington Monument. Then, comes the Naval Air Station. Later, some of the institutions of the District of Columbia. Beautiful wooded shores on each side, at times steep, at others, forming a good beach. Occasionally, an old house which has been allowed to fall into ruins proclaims the day when the river banks were the social center of the countryside. After seven miles of this, Alexandria is reached. Its docks, boats and water front are quite extensive, but their activities, like most of Alexandria, are but relics of a day long past. Time was when Alexandria was expected to be the great city of the country, but it has grown little, if at all, in a hundred years. But it is interesting. From the boat, one can see Old Christ Church, where Washington attended. Also, the Carlyle House, that historic mansion where Braddock and Washington met to plan the campaign which resulted in Braddock's death. The new Washington Memorial, nearly completed, is visible for many miles. It stands on a hill, formerly owned by Washington, where many people wished to have the National Capitol placed. Washington refused because it might be said that he was trying to sell his property to the Government.

Another memorial to Washington is seen for miles—the Memorial Highway to Mt. Vernon, skirting the shore. It will, undoubtedly, be a beautiful drive when completed. It will be a great boon, not only to the thousands of visitors to Mt. Vernon, but to the dwellers of the beautiful homes along the river. Three forts occupy heights along the Potomac. The first, Fort Hunt, was built about 1892, as a measure of coast defense, and is used now by the Coast Artillery. Almost opposite Mt. Vernon is Fort Washington, with such natural advantages that the Indians are said to have named it as early as 1634. In 1645, a colonial fort was established there. Washington chose the place for a fort in 1794. In 1813, President Madison commissioned Major L'Enfant, the original planner of the Capital City appointed by Washington, to prepare plans for enlarging Fort Washington as a defense to the city. These plans were rejected by the Secretary of War, who is quoted as saying: "The British will never be so mad as to make an attempt on Washington, and it is, therefore, totally unnecessary to make any preparations for its defense." (How much this sounds like arguments of today against national defense.)

The following year, a British squadron sailed up the Potomac, and the soldiers manning the fort, blew it up. For this act, the commanding officer was court-martialed. Thus, the British had easy access to Alexandria and Washington. The guns at Fort Washington were fired for the last time to salute Lindbergh when he came up the Potomac on his triumphal return to Washington after his flight to Paris. The old fortifications are plainly seen from the river, useless, today, of course, but surely effective when built. The third fort is Fort Humphrey, built by the Engineering Corps during the World War. On its grounds are the ruins of the home of Lord Fairfax, friend and neighbor of George Washington.

(This trip to be continued next week.) GLADYCE W. SIMMONS —Buy it in O'Neill— FISH HUBBY GOOD NURSE BUT BABES SOON GO BYE-BYE At least one species of fish wife has a "nest" in which to lay her eggs—thanks to perhaps the most thoroughly domesticated hubby on record. At around this time of the year the black bass husband sets to work building a nest for his prospective family of from 2000 to 10000 youngsters, according to Warden J. M. White, of the Alabama department of game and fisheries, as quoted by a bulletin of the American Game Association. He prepares the nest by fanning away from the spot selected all unwanted material. Larger obstructions he removes with his mouth. After the eggs are deposited the male stands guard over them, never leaving for a moment and constantly fanning the nest to keep it free of sediment, until the tiny fish appear sometimes many days later. During this period he is so ferocious he will attack any kind of an intruder.

When his multitudinous offspring are only a few days old, however, they swim beyond his parental control and enter upon a wayward life which soon makes most of his watchfulness go for naught as far as anglers are concerned. The little fish, which grow faster than the rest, promptly begin devouring their sisters and brothers, and very few bass reach maturity.

Guarding bass are easily caught, and when taken from the nest, the eggs for which they died are invariably destroyed by fish, terrapins and other enemies.

Fish experts so far have been unable to devise a method for propagating black bass artificially in fish hatcheries, where other popular game fish are reared by the millions to restock depleted waters. For this reason nearly all states where bass are found are now carefully promoting natural replenishment with closed fishing seasons and spawning refuges.
