The Interstate Power Company have been granted a new 25-year franchise at Hartington, Nebraska. About five or six years ago a light and power company began operating in Hartington in opposition to the Interstate Power Company; the opposition company, in order to get the business operated their plant at a loss to such an extent that they were compelled to close down; they were then taken over by the Interstate Power Company; in lieu of this the Hartington city council granted the new franchise. One of the plants will be torn down.

A large number of the towns and smaller cities over the country have large signs along the principle roads leading into town, announcing the speed limit; in some cases as low as eight miles per hour; drivers utterly disregard such speed limits; if the towns would raise the limit to twenty-five or thirty miles per hour and enforce the ordinance then they would have accomplished some good. There are but few cars that will travel gracefully at eight miles per hour. Many of the speed limits were decided upon years ago when autos were comparatively new and people were not so accustomed to them as they are today. The cities have a speed limit of thirty-five or forty miles per hour where the traffic is heavy and the accidents are no greater in proportion to the traffic than they are in the smaller towns.

The Quilt Tea given by the Ladies Aid of the Methodist church on last Wednesday afternoon was a huge success. There were in all about 60 quilts on display, some of them new and some were more than 100 years old. Among the most interesting was a patch counterpane that was brought over in the Mayflower and was at least 310 years old; it has been in the Ticknor family for a good many generations and is now the property of Mrs. Frances Ticknor Kastor. Another quilt 125 years old and of the Whig Rose pattern, the wide border of which was appliqued by the great grandfather of Mrs. Art Kenner, and Mrs. George Kivitt, was very interesting. Two beautiful blue and white woven counterpanes belonging to A. M. Hopkins, which were made in 1852 by his great-grandmother, made entirely of wool, which she sheared from her own sheep, carded and carried to the woolen mill 20 miles on horseback, were on display. A quaint old sampler quilt owned by Mrs. Anna M. Clark, attracted much attention; a lovely quilt of the star pattern, which was made during the Civil War, by Mrs. Robert Grey, of Page, was also on display; Mrs. Grey is 86 years of age and is still very active in making quilts; during the past few years she has made 13 "double wedding ring" quilts and three "Queen's Bouquet" besides a number of other quilts of simpler patterns. A lovely "Log Cabin," made about fifty years ago by Mrs. B. H. Clute, was much admired; the materials were of the old fashioned kinds, such as alpaca, delaines, merenos, etc. Among the newer quilts, a lovely hand embroidered one made by Mrs. Hancock and a grandmother's flower garden, pieced by Mrs. E. J. Enders, were outstanding, although all of the quilts were beautiful. A four-patch, pieced by Floyd Keyes when a small boy, created a lot of interest. Tea and cupcakes were served throughout the afternoon and evening and a nice sum was realized by the society; ladies from O'Neill, Ewing and Page were in attendance.
