TOTAL NUMBER OF STATE'S ACCIDENTS SHOW A DROP

report. A farmer died of lockjaw resulting from a cut, another died of injuries resulting when a tractor upset with him, a third was killed in a fall, and the fourth man died of injuries sustained when he was struck in the head by a dynamited tree. Three farmers were disabled while cutting down trees. One lost a foot, another an eye, and third sustained a broken back and fractured skull. Another farmer had his hand amputated after he caught it in a grinder.

Six people were hurt by farm animals this week and twelve were cut. Most of the latter injuries were sustained while buzzing wood. Falls accounted for three injuries and four were hurt by machinery. Seven persons were injured while cutting down trees, another farmer ran a hay fork in his face, and still another had a back injury. Three fires were reported on farms.

Industry Shows Big Drop

In contrast to the high totals of the other categories, industrial accidents showed a big drop with just twenty reported as compared to thirty-seven the week before. The list of injured was cut in half with eleven reported as compared to twenty-five in the previous report. A workman was disabled this week in a fall and three others were injured that way. Machinery, cuts, and burns accounted for one injury. One workman had a particle of steel removed from his chin while another suffered a broken nose when he was struck in the face by a wrench. Another had an arm injury and a janitor suffered a badly sprained leg. There were eight industrial fires.

Home Accidents Increase

After showing a big drop the week ending Dec. 18, home accidents reversed their position and again increased. Seventy-five accidents occurred in the homes this week as compared to sixty-seven last week. Forty people were injured or killed as compared to forty-two of the previous week. A child died as the result of swallowing lye several weeks ago. An elderly woman was disabled in a fall. Fourteen persons were injured in falls this week and eight were burned. Two people narrowly escaped death when sodium flouride was put into a cake in place of baking powder. An open safety pin was removed from an infant after he swallowed it and another child was saved when his mother succeeded in removing a nail which he swallowed. Two youngsters drank kerosene with bad results. Two women were almost overcome by gas while working, another had an eye injury, and still another ran a sewing machine needle into her finger. Six people were hurt in washing machine accidents this week. This makes a total of sixty-seven such accidents in the last twenty-five weeks. Thirty-seven fires occurred in the homes.
