THE NEBRASKA SCENE

By the Lowell Service
 The aged of Nebraska, after being shown the rainbow tinted vision of old-age pensions and homestead exemptions, have witnessed a sudden fade-out of all their hopes. Terry Carpenter's Omaha headquarters have folded up; Charley Bryan no longer sings the song of relief for old people. Cecil Matthews is hard to find; from Bowker there comes no word. The campaign for old-age alleviation has fizzled with a suddenness that has provoked angry words from its disillusioned followers:
 Ed Schroeder, at one time credited with being Bryan's arch-lieutenant, asserts that the whole plan has been given up. He explains that the circulation of petitions must be financed; that collections of a dollar a head will not adequately support the circulators of petitions. So the ambitious scheme has been abandoned.
 This leaves Bryan with no important issue. Terry Carpenter is also weaponless. Dr. A. P. Fitzsimmons pursues his campaign for the democratic congressional nomination in the First district. This bars Bryan from opposing Luckey.

Clinton J. Campbell, Lincoln lawyer, is being discussed as a possible opponent of Governor Cochran for the gubernatorial nomination on the democratic side. Reactions from the white-spot advertising campaign, some democrats insist, have created the pressure directed toward the candidacy of Mr. Campbell. The advertising campaign has annoyed a number of governors and has made trouble for the Nebraska delegation in congress. During the last week the Omaha bridge row terminated in the introduction of a bill to reorganize the Dodge street board. Congressman McLaughlin introduced the measure at the request of the governor.
 Boosters for Cochran discount anything like a possible blast from Washington that would be antagonistic to the governor. They insist that he has stood for all the New Deal legislation and has cooperated 100 per cent with the federal departments.

The Circle N Ranch boosters of Hastings and elsewhere in the state have hurled the sombrero of Kenneth H. Gedney of Hastings into the political ring. Gedney, an architect, will compete with Speaker Charles J. Warner for the republican gubernatorial nomination. C. E. Linn, Hastings business man, declares that the Circle N has been launched as a protest against machine politics, too much overhead, and political abuses in general. The objective is a state-wide organization.

Emil Placek of Wahoo, when in Lincoln last week, announced that he had a plan by which Nebraska farmers can obtain adequate storage for their crops. He has arranged, with the cooperation of the FHA, for the building of portable, sectional, wooden storage bins, of eight-sided construction, bolted together. The farmers who buy them will be financed thru the First National bank of Wahoo, of which Placek is president, so that the bins can be bought on monthly, quarterly, or semi-annual payments. The FHA has promised to take any slow paper, up to ten per cent. Open cribs for ear corn will hold 900 bushels, and bins for wheat and shelled corn will hold up to 850 bushels each.

Ray C. Johnson of Lincoln, formerly of Oakland, has filed as a republican candidate for state auditor. O. M. Campbell filed on the republican ticket several weeks ago. Auditor Price so far has not encountered opposition for renomination.

William Thomas of Omaha, was elected president of the Nebraska young republicans at the state meeting at Grand Island. He succeeds William A. Stewart jr., of Lexington.

In support of a quo warranto action to oust Lieutenant Governor Walter H. Jurgensen from office, Attorney General Richard C. Hunter has filed a brief in the Supreme court asserting that Jurgensen is a "mere intruder," and is not the legal incumbent of the office. Hunter claims that the conviction of Jurgensen March 7 on an embezzlement charge automatically removed him from office. Arguments in the Supreme court for the quo warranto suit were set for June 6.

George H. Turner, clerk of the state Supreme court and secretary of the Nebraska Bar association, has sent to 2,500 Nebraska lawyers and district and county judges the first complete directory of Nebraska attorneys that has ever been compiled. The order of the Supreme court establishing an "integrated bar" made this compilation necessary.

A justice of the peace has no authority to remit fines, according to an informal opinion from the office of the attorney general, given out in reply to an inquiry from Alvin J. Ginerich, justice of the peace at Humboldt. Francis V. Robinson, assistant attorney general, states: "That power to remit fines is an executive rather than a judicial or legislative power. No statute gives to a justice of the peace such power."

Last year, 56 persons were injured in automobile accidents during the week-end which included Memorial day. R. F. Weller, chief of the state highway patrol, issued an appeal to all drivers to exercise special care during the Memorial day week-end this year. He urged careful driving, at reasonable speed, and asked drivers who found themselves tired and sleepy to stop and take a rest.

Carlyle Edgell of Rushville, a former Sheridan county judge, who was recently sentenced to from two to four years in the state penitentiary on the charge of embezzling county funds, is now isolated in one of the penitentiary hospital rooms suffering from small pox. Vaccination is the order of the day at the prison, but Dr. B. A. Finkle prison physician, says that he thinks there will be no spread of the disease to other prisoners. All who have not previously been immunized and others who request it are being vaccinated as rapidly as possible.

Among the pleas to be heard by the state board of pardons at its meeting June 8 is that of Kenneth C. Matheson, formerly treasurer of Sheridan county. Several letters asking for clemency have been sent to the board, one being from County Attorney Frank Aplan, who prosecuted Matheson for embezzlement, and one from Allen Strong of Gordon, member of the unicameral, who declares that Matheson was the "victim of unscrupulous advisers whom he had trusted to interpret correctly the law by which he was guided." The board has also been petitioned on behalf of A. T. Cavanaugh, formerly city treasurer of Wayne, among them E. W. Huse, publisher of the Wayne Herald, and Joe Smolski of Wayne.

John K. Selleck, business manager of student athletics at the University of Nebraska, sorrowfully admits, since the recent decision of the United States Supreme court that the federal government can impose levies on athletic contests at state universities, that about $20,000 in federal taxes collected at the university will soon be turned over to the United States treasury. Pending the outcome of the litigation, which was concerning a federal admission tax on tickets to intercollegiate football games at the University of Georgia and Georgia Tech, the money has been kept in a separate fund since July 1, 1937. In case the tax had been ruled invalid, the money would have been used for improvements on the Nebraska stadium and athletic field.

During April, 119,268 Nebraskans received relief amounting to a total of $2,567,365, according to State Assistance Director N. C. Vandemoer. This came from federal, state and county governments and a minute compilation has been made by the statistical division of the assistance department.

The government is supplying the Kansas farmers with grasshopper poison. The government agricultural experts don't like grasshoppers. They prefer to destroy crops in their own way.

We are living in strange times. The New Deal agricultural experts are predicting disaster because we are facing the prospect of good crops.

When it comes to putting over a real organization bill you have to hand it to Adolph Hitler.

Mr. Dahlstein will operate a filling station and restaurant in that city. Carl had been manager of the Texas company service station here for the past several years, which position he resigned a month ago.

Miss Helen Sullivan and Eleanor Kavam left Saturday night for Omaha, where they spent the week-end visiting. Miss Kavan will spend the summer vacation visiting at her home in Albion, while Miss Helen will visit relatives in Omaha for a week, as she is taking her annual vacation from the duties in the office of the county superintendent.

Henry Grady returned Monday night from a two weeks visit to Dallas, Texas, and other cities in that section of the state. Henry went down to attend the funeral of William McCormick, formerly of Omaha, who passed away at his home there after a short illness. Henry says there is a great wheat crop being harvested in that section of Texas and up thru Kansas. He says he saw combines working on nearly every farm and the people in that section are of the opinion that they are harvesting the greatest wheat crop in the history of the nation.

The Situation in China

Definite danger exists that 60,000,000 persons will starve in devastated areas in China before September, 1938, unless help reaches them. It is impossible to plant crops. Untold millions of homes have been destroyed. Enough camps to care for refugees, even in larger cities, cannot be constructed and maintained because of lack of funds.

The committee which acts for the American Red Cross in Shanghai estimates that 1,000,000 children orphaned and homeless, are wandering through the few provinces where surveys have been possible. In American currency $1.00 will feed, clothe, and shelter a Chinese child for one month; $18 will care for an adult refugee one year.

Medical authorities in China say that, with hot weather approaching, devastating epidemics will be inevitable. Many refugees are now dying of typhoid, beri-beri, starvation, pneumonia. It is impossible to give medical attention to all wounded because of lack of personnel and supplies.

Civilian refugees exceed sufferers from warfare wounds eight to one. Estimates of observers on the scene say refugees are increasing at an average rate of 500,000 per day. While reports of warfare fill newspapers, the fact that 6,000,000 are homeless in the Yellow river valley in North China from record floods has gone unnoticed in the foreign press. Practically nothing can be done for them.

Foreigners in China are impressed by the great desire of the Chinese people to help themselves. Overseas Chinese have sent $7,000,000 to Chinese for relief work during recent months. Many wealthy Chinese have given large percentages of their personal fortunes for relief of their countrymen.

Money received by the American Red Cross is being allocated to existing relief agencies in China by a committee of American business men appointed by United States Ambassador Nelson T. Johnson, and called the American Advisory Committee. The Ambassador has cabled his approval of work being done by Chinese relief agencies on numerous occasions, and says they are working as efficiently as possible.

Contributions can be made to Dr. L. A. Carter of O'Neill, chairman of the Holt County Chapter of the Red Cross, or to any local chairman.

You Can Have One Of These Lanterns As A Free Gift!

You will find this lantern very useful. It is two lights in one, a long range focusing light in front and a broad beam flood light on top, both operated by a single switch on the back of the lamp. Farmers find it very useful as it eliminates the danger of fire which is present in lights using a flame. It is also very useful around a car at night, or for any short errand in the dark where light may be needed for a few minutes.

This lantern uses standard flashlight batteries and bulbs, so it is something that will serve you for a long time, and that will not be useless when the first set of batteries are used up.

A YEARS ADVANCE SUBSCRIPTION ENTITLES YOU TO ONE FREE!

Anyone who pays a years advance subscription to The Frontier, will receive one of these lanterns free, as a gift. The offer is open to anyone. Don't fumble in the dark or take chances with matches. Play safe by letting one of the Kwik Lite lanterns light your way.

If your subscription is paid in advance and you do not care to advance it further at this time you may have the lantern free by merely paying 40c to cover the cost of the two batteries and bulbs required to operate it. No other obligation.
