Agricultural Extension News

Holt county farmers have a fine opportunity at this season of the year to compare hybrid corn with open pollinated corn grown under local conditions on farms in various parts of the county.

On the farm of Harry Ressel north of Chambers is a test plot of thirteen of the common varieties of hybrids grown beside open pollinated corn. Hybrid corn in the past year has been a subject of much discussion and very little information has been available as to the possibilities under Holt county conditions.

Other plots of hybrid corn may be found on the farms of John Holliday north of Ewing, Fred Dobrovolsky southwest of Atkinson, and William Grutsch north of O'Neill.

Although demonstrations will be held on many of these farms at a later date, farmers who are interested in growing hybrid corn will enjoy visiting the test plots at this stage and compare under present conditions the hybrid and open pollinated varieties.

Hybrid corn, once adapted varieties become known, gives promise of being very profitable in Holt county and these test plots will make available some definite information on the different varieties of hybrid corn.

Holt county's 4-H club program will in many cases be nearing an end for the year of 1938 when on Saturday, August 27, from 200 to 230 4-H club members and leaders gather in O'Neill for the final achievement day. This day will be spent in competitive judging and demonstration work along with exhibits in home economics projects. At the close of the days competition the county winners who will be chosen to compete at the Nebraska state fair will be named.

Many of Holt county's 4-H club members have done a fine piece of work in carrying their projects. They have proven themselves a valuable asset to their communities and their outstanding achievements should be recognized and complimented.

On or before September 15, all estimated requirements of state expending agencies must be filed in the office of State Tax Commissioner W. H. Smith, director of the state budget. Notices to that effect have been sent out to all departments, offices and state institutions which will request appropriations from the legislature for the biennium from July 1, 1939, to June 30, 1941. All money received during the current biennium must be reported, as well as the anticipated receipts for the coming two years.

In accordance with the Japanese custom of paying respect to the memory of departed loved ones every thirteen years after death, Ya Bryan Yamashita, protegee of William Jennings Bryan, has written to Charles W. Bryan, brother of the "Great Commoner," telling him that he will soon be in Lincoln to plan memorial services before going on to Arlington cemetery in Washington. Yamashita, who is now in the Japanese diplomatic service, came to Lincoln years ago as a boy of twenty because of his great admiration for William Jennings Bryan, and was taken into the Bryan home, where he served as man of all work while obtaining an English education in the Lincoln high school and later in the University of Nebraska.

"All I can do," said Attorney General R. C. Hunter, in regard to a request for representatives of the federal social security board that he clarify the jurisdiction of the state board of control in fixing the standards for county assistance employes under the new merit system, "is to interpret the state and federal laws in this respect." A question has been raised as to the authority of the state board of control to adopt regulations which would be binding on county assistance committees in employing persons to aid in the discharge of its duties.

Authority over some 22 million acres of land in Nebraska, Colorado, North and South Dakota, Montana and Wyoming is held by the bureau of agricultural economics, recently brought to Lincoln thru a consolidation of the Denver and Lincoln bureaus. Sixty employees have been brought to Lincoln under the supervision of R. E. Willard, regional director, and offices have filled two floors of the Sharp building.

A decision of the Hall county district court holding two parts of the 1937 cream grade law unconstitutional will be appealed to the Supreme court, according to B. L. Overcash, assistant attorney general. Red coloring in cream unfit for human consumption and a $25 license fee for brokers are the two disputed points.

I. V. Packard, new secretary of the state aeronautics commission, announces that plans are under way for the organization of a Nebraska National guard air observation squadron. The last legislature appropriated $10,000 for an airport base and approved such a squadron. A resolution was passed favoring the militia air squadron and recommending re-appropriation of the state allocation. The United States army, Mr. Packard says, will on authorization from Washington, provide flying instructors, thirteen army observation planes, and a land crew to service and maintain them. The state must furnish the airport, which must not be a commercial one, a machine shop, hangars, and landing field, and must secure sufficient enlistments from the Nebraska guardsmen.

Attorney General Hunter has issued five rulings in regard to elections: (1) A legal voter has the right to vote at a primary for non-political candidates, without stating his political party affiliations. (2) One may file for a county poli-

When You Buy Beer

... it will pay you to patronize a reputable dealer. Why? Because reputable dealers are the bulwark of the Nebraska brewing industry, which spends millions of dollars annually in state and municipal taxes, in farm products, in supplies of allied industries. These millions constitute a huge investment paying regular dividends in economic benefits to the state and lessening your tax burden. To patronize disreputable dealers is to jeopardize your own pocketbook.
