Another Coyote Hunt Will Be Next Sunday

Another coyote hunt will be held Sunday, north of O'Neill at 2:00 p. m. The hunt starts at the old Ernst Stein place on the highway, then west to Honey Creek, thence north on Honey Creek to the Eagle, and down the Eagle to the Liddy bridge, thence south along the highway to the Stein place.

All those participating are asked to unload their guns at the end of the hunt as a safeguard against accidents.

Hoppers Liable to Be Bad During Year 1939

Grasshopper egg population in November was about 15% less than at the corresponding time in 1937 according to O. S. Bare, Extension Entomologist, in a report to the County Agricultural Agent, Lyndle R. Stout.

This report shows that Holt County is listed with a slight increase in infestation over a year ago and also that Boyd, Rock and Knox counties show heavy increase. A vigorous "war" against grasshoppers a year ago was carried on. A total of 11,900 pounds of bait was distributed to farmers with good "kills" reported where bait was used properly. Plans are now being made for a similar campaign this spring to combat hoppers.

With north central Nebraska almost without exception showing an increase in infestation, farmers are urged to keep in mind proper methods of avoiding serious damage.

Burning grass and weeds will not hurt grasshopper eggs but it may kill thousands of beneficial insects such as lady bird beetles and ground beetles. In addition it encourages soil erosion and destroys most of the food and shelter for valuable wildlife.

Grasshopper eggs are so deeply embedded in the ground that burning grass and weeds has no effect except make them hatch earlier in the spring.

Who's Who in Nebraska

Work of compiling the first All-Nebraska "Who's Who in Nebraska" is now under way and representatives of the Nebraska Press are calling on a select list of men and women in the state.

The people being contacted are representative of the state and localities and have either been active in civic life or have attained unusual recognition in their respective fields.
