NORTHEAST SHIELDS

A pair of twin calves were born Friday, March 24th at the Deed Murphy farm, one a heifer and the other a bull calf, both with perfect Hereford markings. Their mother is a four year old cow. D. F. seems to be really going into the Hereford line as he bought two White Face Hereford registered bulls this spring at the O'Neill sale pavilion.

Walter Brennan left Friday morning for Omaha to attend the funeral of his uncle, M. P. Brennan.

Mrs. James Brennan spent Friday afternoon visiting Mrs. M. A. Whaley.

Miss Bernice Murphy spent from Thursday until Sunday visiting in this city at the home of her aunt, Mrs. H. E. Coyne.

Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Keefe were Saturday afternoon callers at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Sullivan.

(Bob) Robert Hanley, son of Mr. and Mrs. Will Hanley, of north of this city, is a sophomore in the O'Neill public high school, went to Wayne on Saturday morning, where he was entered in an oratorical contest. His division was humorous. He returned that night. Bob rated very high in the contest.

Miss Bessie Brennan spent the week-end visiting friends at Ewing. Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Harrington drove out to the D. F. Murphy farm Sunday evening to see the twin calves.

NOT TOO MUCH

The various means of local O'Neill families is often a topic of conversation and comment. We often wonder how so and so can afford this and that. Did you know that the average American family spends from $1,200 to $1,500 a year? This would figure a suit about every four years for Father, seldom a telephone for the family, Mother spending $3 for a winter and summer hat and the food would be lacking in delicacies. And America's living standard leads the world. This would indicate that we have much. When they speak of over-production it doesn't mean too many suits for Dad and hats for Mom, and green vegetables and steam heat.

ECONOMIC HIGHLIGHTS

Happenings that Affect the Dinner Pails, Dividend Checks and Tax Bills of Every Individual. National and International Problems Inseparable from Local Welfare

There is an American tradition to the effect that the Vice-President of the Republic shall be a man who says little and does less—an official with an imposing title and a substantial salary, but with few responsibilities and almost no authority. Some years ago a very successful stage farce was written around the idea of a vice-president named Winterbottom who kept wandering about his party headquarters and could find no one who knew or cared who he was. And, in actual history, the vice-presidency has been used more than once to "get rid" of some man whom the party leaders thought too troublesome. Roosevelt the first is a case in point—he was kicked upstairs into the vice-presidency because he had made many enemies as Governor of New York, and he very likely would have been doomed to obscurity had not McKinley's assassination taken him to the White House.

"Cactus Jack" Garner seemed to be the perfect stuff of which a run-of-the-mill vice-president should be made. An able congressman, with decades of service behind him, he was known as a hard but unspiteful worker. And when he assumed his position of vice-president, he seemed to fit well into the classic mold. A good disciplinarian and administrator, he apparently took little part in politics. He wasn't often in the headlines. But now, times have dramatically changed, and it is around the general, plain figure of Jack Garner that much of today's most important political discussion is centering. He has become the great hope of the conservatives in the Democratic party—and the leader of a quiet but unrelenting "rightist rebellion" against the New Deal.

In the view of some of the most astute political commentators, the Vice-President is well suited to this new role. In origin, training and experience he is the logical representative of those millions of people of whom little is heard but who nonetheless hold the real balance of power in America—the merchant, the farmer, the rancher, the small town banker and lawyer and doctor. In political philosophy, he might be termed a conservative liberal—he believes reform should be achieved slowly and cautiously without disheartening or discouraging business. He has certain gifts of immense political importance—a nerveless patience (it is characteristic of the man that he is called the best poker player in Washington, where famous poker players abound); a vast knowledge of the techniques of political strategy; a talent for making friends; a winning, "home-spun" personality; a knack for terse, individually phrased comments on events. The latter is illustrated by a remark he is rumored to have made to the President: "You've got to give the cattle (meaning business) a chance to put some fat on their bones."

It is around Garner that the potent pro-economy group of Democratic senators has gathered. He is very close to Senator Harrison, who is leading the economy drive on the floor. He is strongly in favor of tax revision—though, like the cagey politician he is, he does his talking in the privacy of his office, and not in public. And it is universally reported that he was largely responsible for persuading the Senate to reduce the WPA appropriation asked by the President, to the tune of $150,000,000. As Time observes, "Extraordinary fact about the Garner Rebellion is that its leader does not for one minute expect to win its Economy objective; at least, not at this session of Congress." He is biding his time, getting in his licks, and planning for the future.

Highly significant is the fact that Garner now leads in all the standard polls for 1940's Democratic presidential nomination. On the debit side is the fact that he is 70 now—an age that is generally regarded as being too old for the tugging job of Chief Executive. But he seems to be in the pink physically as well as mentally. A powerful group is getting ready to back him for the nomination, and there's certainly at least a fair chance he'll get it. At any event, he is a force to be reckoned with.

It is a tragically ironic commentary on the world we live in that Hitler's new Czech "adventure" came just at the time when the heads of governments were drawing deep breaths, relaxing and saying that the prospects for peace had at last brightened. The ex-house painter likes to do the unexpected—and he outdid himself this time. Further, in the view of some, he may have at last taken the rope that will eventually hang him.

The seizure of Moravia and Bohemia was, legally and ethically, far less excusable than the previous conquest which was signed at Munich. He deliberately violated every promise and guarantee, written and verbal, he had made there. The immediate reaction in France, England and this country was one of anger and disgust. And Mr. Chamberlain made a strong speech at Birmingham in which he said, in effect, that he was through with his policy of appeasement—and intimated that England was ready to fight.

What of the future? Well, as one newspaper correspondent writes, "Imagining the incredible seems to be the best method of prophecy at present."

TOO CLEAN

Most every family has a woman in it who makes her life miserable and the family uncomfortable, by her constant use of cleaning. You would swear some women folks would prefer to be laid out with a mop or a broom rather than a lily, the way many of them spend their lives scrubbing and dusting. Consider the little 70-year-old lady who stood on her veranda with a broom while her house burned. Each fireman, before entering the house, got his feet brushed so he wouldn't track any dirt inside. The house wasn't burning down, it was only a chimney fire but the fire fighters didn't get the floor dirty by tracking into the house. There is many a local O'Neill man who feels he literally gets his feet swept before he dares enter his home. Cleanliness may be next to godliness, but sometimes it is uncomfortable being so close.

Word has been received in O'Neill, by relatives, of the birth of a son, James Elmer, to Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Lohr of Columbus, Nebraska, on March 23rd. Mrs. Lohr will be remembered here as Miss Loretta Saunto, daughter of Abe Saunto.

FARM AND THE JEW

One of the chief criticisms of the Jew has been the impression that he was not a producer, that he was interested in being the middle-man in a business transaction. It has been said he lives only in the cities, too keen in driving business bargains and in obtaining the largest share of business profits. These have been mentioned with the shake-up in Germany. Propaganda all about us will cause one to lose good judgment. There may be folks, with a less keen business mind forced into agricultural regions that the Jew has declined to consider. But before making any statements concerning the farm and the Jew in Germany, consider the report of the Jewish Agricultural society in our country, which shows that there has been a steady expansion of the Jewish farming community. During last year, 1,222 persons have sought the aid of the society in obtaining jobs on the land. This is an item to count on.
