CITY PRIDE

We have been doing a lot of cleaning about the house. Every one likes to live in surroundings that are neat and clean, though there is a lot of work to keep it this way. It is good to have the clean windows and curtains, polished furniture and floors, sight of scrubbed and painted surfaces. What about the town you live in? The homes in O'Neill may shine in cleanliness but can we say the same for local yards and streets, vacant lots and alley-ways? Civic pride calls for a spring cleaning of all areas that are unsightly spots. Improve the appearance of this town. Auto drivers would appreciate improved streets, pedestrians would welcome improved sidewalks. There is always something to be done to make this a more attractive hometown. Let us leave a pleasant remembrance in the minds of those folks who will be stopping here and driving through during the coming summer months.

Store Employees Help To Harvest Hidden Tax Crop

Holt County has an estimated 479 "unofficial tax collectors" who indirectly are helping local, state and national governments harvest their annual revenues, the National Consumers Tax Commission declared today.

The unofficial, and generally unwilling, "tax collectors," according to the NCTC are the proprietors and employees in the 21 local retail stores.

"There are 8,455 official tax levying and spending governmental agencies in Nebraska," said Mrs. Melville Muckelstone, vice president of the nation-wide women's organization. "But every clerk behind every store counter is actually a tax collector, too."

"In every sale, these clerks collect fractions of hidden taxes that have increased the cost of production and distribution of the article purchased. These taxes, of necessity, must be passed on to the consumer as a part of the price. A major share of all local, state and national taxes now are hidden to consumers who pay them this way."

"The store clerks, of course, don't realize it any more than the customer does, but every ring of the cash register represents not only a sale but a tax payment."

The NCTC now has study groups in 4,600 communities in 45 states in its educational campaign to expose "unnecessary consumer-penalizing taxes," Mrs. Muckelstone said. The crusade in this state is led by Mrs. I. S. Magowan, of Gordon, state director and Mrs. George Dewald, of Westpoint, national committee member.

When you meet an O'Neill man who is in a hurry to get home, you can bet his wife is through with her house-cleaning.

One thing the newspaper has over the radio. In case of an argument, you can at least show a clipping.

There isn't an O'Neill fellow who doesn't realize by this time that it doesn't matter how hard you swear, you can't scare a thermometer.

The sociable man is that fellow who comes over to sit on your porch and doesn't think of asking if you might have other plans.

A letter from home, The Frontier.

Flue-Dried Tobacco Was

Idea of Virginia Ever Made

The greatest stride ever made in the preparation of bright tobacco for market was the discovery of the system of curing or drying it with a flue, writes R. S. Barbour Jr. in the Richmond Times-Dispatch.

As nearly as can be determined, the discovery was made in 1869. William T. Ballou, planter, living about three miles from South Boston, Va., one of the leading tobacco markets of the world, was the first to cure bright tobacco with a flue. In 1869 curing of fruits was unknown and when fruit was to be saved it was necessary to dehydrate it; that is, drain it of all moisture. Ballou was known over a large area as an especially fine fruit dryer, doing it for his own use, to sell it, and largely as a hobby. The year 1869 was rainy and he had been unable to dry his pears, peaches, apples, plums and figs. It was while he was worrying over this situation that Upton Thomas Bowden, itinerant tinner, stopped by and asked for a night's lodging. On discovering that Bowden was a tinner, Ballou asked him if he could build a flue, one that he could use to dry his fruit, and then explained to him his idea. The system was forthwith given a trial and it worked beyond the anticipation of the two men.

Ballou then reasoned that the same system could be used for his tobacco. This was given a trial and in the words of Ballou on viewing the first flue-cured tobacco, "It is beautiful."

Life of Sappho, Poetess

Of Greece, Holds Mystery

Little is known of the life of Sappho, greatest poetess of Greece, and with a few exceptions only fragments remain of her poems, remarkable for their extreme simplicity of language and intensity of emotion, relates a writer in the New York World-Telegram.

Until 50 years ago her verse survived only in quotations found in the works of ancient authors. Since that time there have been recovered from the soil of Egypt papyrus rolls containing apparently authentic texts of her poetry, copied during the Second to Seventh centuries, A. D.

Sappho was a native of the Island of Lesbos, probably born about 600 B. C. and probably a member of the aristocratic Mytilenean family. The astonishing simplicity of her poems, apparently written in the every day language of the people with whom she lived, and the flaming quality of both her loves and hates have baffled translators, who say that she cannot be appreciated fully except by those able to read her original Greek texts.
