Looking Forward

By Franklyn Waltman
Publicity Director,
Republican National Committee

One difficulty about Washington is that you become so intent looking at the trees you cannot see the forest. President Roosevelt frequently has said as much and puts his words to practical application by annually making a journey across the country. He proposes to do so this year—in October. It is a good idea. Everyone connected with national affairs should get out of Washington regularly and take a look around the country to see and hear what is going on.

But we wonder whether Mr. Roosevelt on such trips really gets the heart-beat of the country. He rides in a special train and seldom gets a chance to rub elbows with ordinary folks. Democratic leaders, anxious to please, come aboard and whisper to the President that he is still the idol of the people. None have the courage to tell him unpleasant things. That is only human nature. Those who are critical of the Roosevelt Administration, of course, are not invited to come forward to the train.

F. D. R. Popularity Waning
If, despite such obstacles, Mr. Roosevelt really does feel the heart-beat of the country this fall, he is in for the surprise of his life. In the first place he will find out that he is not nearly as popular as he was a year or two ago. Secondly, he will learn that the country, generally speaking, is souring on the New Deal. Mr. Roosevelt will be surprised because his actions in recent weeks indicate an assumption or pretense that the country is as strong for him as it was in 1936.

We say this with some confidence because, adopting Mr. Roosevelt's rule, the writer has made a trip across the country—not in a special train—not guarded by Secret Service men, but rubbing shoulders with all types of people in some dozen states out to the Pacific coast and back.

We have avoided the viewpoints of the people who ride in the Pullman cars or who stay in the best hotels. We have chosen to talk with farmers, cattlemen, little businessmen, small town editors, men in overalls and housewives. We visited big cities but we also went down the dirt roads in the mountain and prairie states because we really wished to know what people were saying and thinking.

G. O. P. Enthusiasm Grows
Undoubtedly we talked with more Republicans than Democrats or New Dealers. Yet that does not impeach the value of the evidence we found because the spirit of these Republicans reflected the situations in their home communities. The fact that Republicans are more enthusiastic about their future prospects than at any time since 1930 indicates the switch that has taken place in public opinion.

In general it might be said that a shift in sentiment away from the New Deal and toward sense and sanity in government has taken place in all parts of the country. Apparently taxation has commenced to pinch the average man and woman and they are reacting as people always do when they are hit on the pocketbook nerve.

The reason which prompted the House of Representatives to refuse to consider the last Roosevelt spending bill becomes obvious to one visiting around the country. A popular revolt against further government spending is evident in every state. In any discussion of national politics the first thing you hear is that people have become wearied of ever-increasing spending and mounting government debt.

New Deal Failures Noted
People tell you that if economic recovery could be achieved through the Federal Government spending huge sums such action might be all right—that perhaps the country could stand it. But, they assert, it is now obvious that recovery cannot be achieved through spending.

Then they point out that the country is still confronted by most of the major problems from which it suffered in 1933. The 11,000,000 unemployed, the low level of farm prices, the precarious condition of many business enterprises and the sluggish condition of business generally are cited as specific instances of the failure of the New Deal to bring about recovery by spending.

These grievances are cited in every state visited. In addition, complaints are made about the failure of the New Deal farm plans, the administration of the Labor Relations Act, the operation of the so-called Reciprocal Trade Agreements

PLEASANT DALE

Russell Gray returned to his home at Geddes, S. D., Monday. Russel has been helping Leon Beckwith with his farm work this summer.

LaVerne Stahley went to Atkinson Monday where he will attend high school.

Mr. and Mrs. Orville White and family returned to their home at Sioux City Friday. Mrs. White and children have been here for some time and Mr. White came last week for a short visit. Mrs. White is a daughter of Mrs. Walter Spangler.

Miss Olive Beckwith went to Star Monday where she will teach the coming term. Her mother, Mrs. Guy Beckwith taught the same school 24 years ago.

Mrs. Sjms Timmerman and little son returned to their home at Burbank, Washington after an extended visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Monahan. Mrs. Timmerman was formerly Miss Marjorie Monahan.

Mrs. Ralph Leidy and little daughter, Carol, visited at the John Kee home Thursday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Leon Beckwith and daughter, Leona Fern, were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Verne Beckwith Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. John Kee enjoyed a visit with relatives from Iowa last week.

Vernon Beckwith returned home Friday. Vernon has been helping with the haying at his grandfather Beckwith's.

George Pongratz is driving a new car.

and the Roosevelt Administration's encouragement of radical and Communistic elements. These will be recited in some detail in subsequent articles in this place.

Most surprising of all is the general feeling among Republicans that Mr. Roosevelt more easily could be defeated next year than a more conservative Democrat. Indeed the feeling among Republicans generally seems to be that Mr. Roosevelt should be encouraged to seek a third term—since he would be certain to split his party asunder and would go down to defeat.

Prairie Hill Calf Club

The Prairie Hill Calf Club held their sixth meeting Sept. 2, at the home of Marion and Dean DeLong. All the members were present.

Members named the parts of a calf, Mary Fiola named the most parts. We decided to have a special meeting Sept. 17, at the home of Frank Musil.

The club wrote a letter to the Lions Club in O'Neill thanking them for a very pleasant day spent at the park.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Noring were visitors. Lunch was served.
Marion DeLong, reporter.

Singing Summer Sewers

The Singing Summer Sewers 4-H Club held their last meeting Aug. 30 at the home of Fred Carey.

There were four members absent. At the meeting we filled out our final reports. The leader also checked our summer wardrobe.

After the meeting was adjourned, sandwiches, cookies and lemonade were served.
Doris Hansen, reporter.

Mrs. John Chilton and niece, Ahrina Manson, of Sioux City, spent the week end at the home of their brother and uncle, Charles Manson.

Mr. and Mrs. John McCarthy, of Hastings, spent the week end here visiting at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. McCarthy.

Deputy Sheriff C. C. Bergstrom left Saturday for Benkleman, Nebraska, to pick up Carl Primus, of Ewing, Nebraska, who had been arrested on a complaint signed by Blanch A. Edwards charging him with deserting and neglecting his three minor children. He was before County Judge Louis Reimer on Wednesday, where he waived preliminary hearing and was bound over to the District Court.

Congressman Patrick J. Boland, majority whip of the National House of Representatives, says he is contemplating the dismissal of seven of the sixteen assistant whips in the House because they were disloyal to the President's policies in the last session of Congress. But sometimes these purges don't turn out as well as expected.
