CONGRESS AS SEEN BY KARL STEFAN

To Investigate Third District Drouth Conditions

Congressman Karl Stefan has been called to Nebraska due to the emergency existing in farm foreclosure and relief following the serious drouth in his district.

Congressman Stefan conferred on Tuesday afternoon with Mr. H. A. Lake, Assistant Deputy Land Bank Commissioner of the Farm Credit Administration, and secured information that he will take back to the hard pressed farmers in his district. He is to accumulate information and report, upon his return to Washington, to the Farm Credit Administration, at the request of the latter.

The Congressman was informed by House leaders that no legislation will be taken up in the House until possibly October 9th, when he again expects to be in his Washington office.

Congressman Stefan has been requested to particularly report on the large number of individual hardship cases of farmers. He was informed that the Farm Credit Administration is intensely interested in keeping farmers on their farms instead of having them abandon farms and move into the towns where they may very likely simply increase the relief load.

To Act On Neutrality In October

Members of the House of Representatives are told that there will be no vote in the house on the neutrality bill until sometime in October. Because of the House having acted upon the so-called Bloom Bill last June, the consideration of neutrality legislation proposals in the extraordinary session was initiated by the Senate. The Senate committee has, in effect, struck out all of the language of the original bill, following the enacting clause, and tentatively written a new bill. The revised measure provides for the repeal of the controversial embargo on arms, munitions and implements of war, and carries six other separate propositions. Debate in the Senate will likely extend over many days. However, Senate opponents of the measure say that there will be no filibuster. The nature of the bill that the House will ultimately be called upon to consider in the light of changed conditions, now, as compared to early last summer, will be determined largely, if not wholly, by the kind of bill sent back to the House by the Senate.

Constituents Urge Retention Of Arms Embargo

Every member has thousands of letters from his constituents. An overwhelming majority urge retention of the arms embargo and demand strict neutrality. Those writing for repeal as well as those advising against repeal, demand that members assure them that the United States will not again go to war. Very few Senators or Representatives want any more war. The President has repeatedly stated he is against war. No one really knows what will happen should the arms embargo be repealed. Many of those favoring repeal point to the fact that unemployment would be eliminated and business would be improved if we repealed the embargo and start all our factories making munitions of war. Very few say anything about the second depression that will follow peace if and when peace comes to the world again.

Domestic Problems Must Be Considered

The desks of members are piled high with all kinds of propaganda mail and each day every office is crowded with visitors talking for and against the arms embargo and neutrality. Some of the bolder lobbyists come out openly for our active participation in the war against Germany. They believe we should take sides. Others, who sympathize with the democracies fear that showing preference is the surest way to war involvement.

These are grave moments which rock the hearts and souls of men and women. Sympathies are with the democracies, yet the United States is still quivering from the effects of the last war. With millions of people unemployed and with another drouth in Nebraska, the domestic problems overshadow the problems of foreign countries in the minds of many midwestern members.

Letters Swamp Congressmen

Many House members are going home again. They are told by their leaders that there will be no legislation in the House while the Senate is wrestling with the neutrality bill. They are told the House will recess every 3 days and that if something unforeseen occurs they will be notified in advance. So many are going home to talk to their constituents. Many are remaining to attend conferences and reply to the thousands of letters which flood their desks. Steve Bolles, a member from Wisconsin, has the most letters. He replied to 11,000 last Saturday and still has ten thousand to answer. The number in the Third district office has reached 3,000 and all will be replied to. It will be physically impossible to reply individually and a form letter reply will have to be resorted to.

Arms Embargo Would Win Today

While the House members are marking time, the folks at home should know that if a vote on war was taken today, less than 90 members in the House would vote for war. The guess, also, is that if a vote was taken in both houses, today, the President would win his desired repeal of the arms embargo. What the public sentiment will do in October when the vote is taken is another matter. Public sentiment in America usually rules.

Despite early efforts by conservation boosters, Nebraska is out of step on several opportunities of getting funds for irrigation, soil conservation and flood control.

State Administrator Dwight F. Felton has succeeded in getting 5,000 more added to the WPA rolls with the help of boosters who wish to relieve the suffering in the state. Last June an effort was made to interest certain sections of the state in irrigation as a defense measure in case of prolonged war.

At Sargent and other places in the cattle country, efforts were made to induce local bankers to prepare for the present situation.

In parts of Valley, Sherman and Custer counties, there was no cooperation. Local interest could not be aroused. Consequently, if adverse conditions are encountered next season, several of these communities will be listed as liabilities.

Congressman Cal. T. Curtis, of Minden, has filed for renomination on the republican ticket. Henry C. Blome, of Dalton, republican, filed several months ago.
