

Windsor Returns to England—Again in Uniform

The duke of Windsor, ending almost three years of self-imposed exile, has returned with his American-born wife to England, where he will serve as major general in the British expeditionary forces. Right: Arrow points to the prince of Wales (now the duke of Windsor) during the World war, marching on his way to join his father, King George, in France. The youthful prince was elated over the fact that his father allowed him to join the expeditionary forces.

Winged 'Wooden Horse' Carries Soviet Gunners

The wooden horse of Troy has a modern counterpart in this military transport plane of the mighty red army of Soviet Russia. Carrying 16 men armed with machine guns in wing compartments, these planes fly to a point behind enemy lines, where the gunners are dropped by parachute. A fleet of these planes can land a sizable army in a very short time.

U. S. Gunners Bolster Canal Defenses

Anti-aircraft troops of the Sixty-second coast artillery on board the army tug "Major Normoyle" on the first leg of their trip to the Panama Canal Zone, where they will bolster this country's defenses. The troops later transferred to a U. S. army transport off the Brooklyn army-base.

Fatherly Advice

Professing himself ready to fight as his father did 21 years ago, Alvin C. York Jr. wants to join the navy. Sergeant York, who captured a German machine gun company single-handed during the World war, is showing his old tunic to Junior. The sergeant thinks the boy's place is in the infantry, however. "The time to hit," young York declared, "is while the hittin's good."

Cannon Coiffure

At long last war has succeeded in getting into milady's hair. Here is a coiffure decorated with air craft and cannon decorations in silver. It was demonstrated at a New York hairdressers' convention.

Ornate and Lavish Use of Fur Registers on Style Program

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

TRIM your new dress, jacket, or coat with fur and you can't go wrong. Everything from bedjackets shoes, gloves and handbags to coats, dresses, suits, jackets and ensembles is being trimmed with fur this season. You can have as little an amount of fur or as lavish a trimming of fur as you wish just so your costume be furred in some stylish way.

It adds greatly to the zest of the mode in that designers are displaying such exciting imagination and originality in the new fur treatments. Whether the garment has a dab of fur here and there or a whole lot of rich fur there is intrigue in its method. New uses of fur include stunning shoulder trims in epaulet effects which on form-fitting cloth coats make one look wide at the top, accenting the now-so-fashionable tiny waistline. Vestees of fur, notably beaver or Persian lamb or gray kidskin, plastered on the front of cloth coats are chic as can be. Dabs of fur on pockets matching narrow fur collars subscribe to the "touch of fur" edict. Fur that binds edges give "tone" to many a suit jacket.

One of the most important uses of fur is the new border treatments. These show early Victorian influence in that quaint borderings and bandings (sometimes row above row) appear on many of the smartest dresses and coats. Gray for fall is the talk o' town and showing in the coat sections are many smartly styled models in gray wool that are attractively trimmed with gray kidskin or squirrel or with chinchilla, also sheared beaver. The revival of chinchilla as a fashionable fur is a notable outstanding event this season. The enthusiasm for red which is so apparent throughout style centers this fall leads to coats and costumes of this gay hue that are trimmed with contrasting fur. Striking are the new ripped-in-at-the-waist coats recently shown.

A newcomer to the fur fashion picture is burgundy-dyed silver fox, processed by bleaching the skins and dipping them to a beguiling reddish red tone. See it in unique and lavish treatment on the jacket suit pictured to the left. A velvet pill box in matching burgundy is worn with coque feather trim in like color.

Slate blue and soft gray were selected for the eye-arresting ensemble shown to the right in the group. Gray caracul is deftly manipulated to fashion the close-fitting collar, full length sleeves and combination muff handbag. The coat zips from the neck to its belted waist where the skirt hangs in unpressed pleats. The turban is in slate blue to match the smartly detailed coat. The dress is gray.

Ideal for early autumn is the costume centered in the group. This dressy ensemble includes a crepe frock with a bolero that has fox fur sleeves. The color is beige, to match with a wrapped turban of the crepe is added plus suede bag and gloves.

The arrangement of fur as portrayed in the inset reflects unerring chic. Here black crepe and silver fox combine to achieve a stunning costume. The dress is simply made with a circular skirt. The placement of fur on the brief jacket is intricate and artful. A draped turban with black aigrettes posed at the front tunes to the call for "stylish black."

Gay Suede Belt

There is definite style emphasis placed on belts in the new fall showings. One of the reactions to the enthusiasm for leather trimmings and details that now holds forth in the fashion realm is the belt fashioned of bright colored suede. With complete assurance of being smartly dressed, the young girl here pictured wears a wool crepe dress with the important below-elbow sleeves. She gives the outfit an extra dash of swank by encircling her waist with a most exciting bright suede belt designed by Criterion.

Four Bows

Victor Stiebel recently designed a daytime frock he named "little bow dress," because of a quartet of stitched-down bows that outline the deep yoke.

Mode Brightened By Plaid Woolens

Strikingly handsome and gay plaid woolens are enlivening the present mode in more ways than one. Young girls are wearing plaid wool skirts topped with cunning snug velvet jackets crowning the costume with a jaunty Scotch plaid little hat. Plaid is also fashionable for jacket suits and the topcoats of plaid showing this season are gorgeous to behold. Some are made in soft dress-maker style; others are strictly tailored. The monotone coat lined with plaid is also a style winner.

One of the newest notes sounded is the use of plaid in an accessory way. Milliners are making hat and bag sets of bright wool plaids that set off the new black coats and dresses to perfection. When the plaids trim monotone forest greens or browns or the new wine colored wools they carry the costume color in their own weaves highlighted with multi-colored plaid patternings.

Flared Skirt Is Still a Favorite

Despite the fact that the big news of the Paris season is the straight skirt, and practically every designer shows it in one version or another, there is plenty of evidence that the popular flared skirt is far from finished. Sponsored by such important names as Lelong, Molyneux and Mainbocher, it has a firm place in the mode and is being shown with a new sophistication.

The flare doesn't start at the belt in schoolgirl fullness but is controlled and fitted to well over the hip. Individuality and newness are achieved by Lelong not only through the lower and more intricate flare but by blouse and belt details as well.

Helpful Opposition

A certain amount of opposition is a great help to a man. Kites rise against, not with, the wind. Even a head-wind is better than nothing. No man ever worked his voyage in a dead calm. The best wind for everything in the long run is a side wind.—John Neal.
