Mrs. Wm. Schwinck and Mrs. Dale Clark of Neligh were here Friday visiting friends and looking after business.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Butler and daughters of Neligh were here Sunday visiting relatives.

Mrs. M. A. Peterson

Funeral services were held here at the M. E. Church Sunday for Mrs. M. A. Peterson of Neligh, who passed away in that city on Thursday evening. Rev. Chas. Soderstein of Clearwater, L. D. S. minister, was in charge. He was assisted by Rev. E. B. Maxey, pastor of the local Methodist church. Music was furnished by the faculty quartette of the Neligh High School. Mrs. Peterson, who was the former Hattie Crosser of Inman, grew to womanhood in this community and was married to M. A. Peterson, who was also a resident of Inman. Much of their married life was spent here with the exception of a few years spent in Omaha and about eight years ago they moved to Neligh where they have since resided. To this home came three children, Emory C., of O'Neill, Josephine, who died in childhood, and Ellen G. who lives in San Francisco, Calif. Preceding her in death were her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Crosser and three brothers, Morgan, Harry, and Elmer, who passed away about three weeks ago.

She leaves to mourn her passing, her husband, M. A. Peterson, her son, Emory and wife of O'Neill, and her daughter, Ellen and husband of California. Mrs. Peterson was for many years a member of the Latter Day Saints church and as long as her health permitted was very active in church work. She was a woman of pleasing personality and had a host of friends wherever she lived. Floral offerings were many and beautiful. Interment was made in the Inman cemetery by the side of her little daughter.

EMMET ITEMS

Two trips, within a few days time, between Nebraska and Washington. One by automobile and one by railroad. Heavy snow all the way. Temperature from 17 above to 15 below.

Four members of the House and one member from the Senate acted as honorary pallbearers at the funeral of the late George Heinke of Nebraska City who served a year as Representative from the First District. He leaves a widow and three sons. Mr. Heinke died following an automobile accident that occurred while he and Mrs. Heinke were driving to Washington. Mrs. Heinke has two broken legs and a broken arm.

Joe Martin, the minority floor leader, is being boomed as a Republican presidential candidate. The movement is started from his home state. Talk about a Roosevelt third term predominates political gossip here. The president's friends say they have already started the campaign.

There is no war in Finland. That is what members are told by the foreign officials who say the war is "undeclared," and if accepted as a war, the same recognition would have to go to China where "there is no war officially."

For nearly a week, experts on Farm Chemurgy have been testifying before a group of members who are trying to develop information on new uses for farm products. One witness who manufactures alcohol, says he formerly bought 35,000 bushels of corn per day until black strap molasses began coming in free of duty from Cuba. He no longer buys corn and uses the foreign substance exclusively.

The chiefs of the Federal Bureau of Prisons are again before the Appropriations Committee. They say they expect an increase of 2,000 in the federal prison population in 1940. Stricter law enforcement and new federal laws, they say, cause the increase. Believe it or not, the No. 1 law violation on the books of the federal prisons is that in transgression of the liquor laws. There are now more prisoners for liquor law violations than during prohibition days.

J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the F. B. I., appeared before the Appropriations sub-committee to justify increased expenditures for the next fiscal year. The chief of the men told the sub-committee the new national defense program is adding greatly to his work. Hundreds of investigators are in the field. They have found many causes for alarm.

The war in Europe is more serious than many people at home can realize. "Off the record" testimony in various committees indicates that we have plenty of enemies in our own midst and that sabotage activities have already begun. Many of these activities have been frustrated by alert investigators.

Ed O'Neill, head of the American Farm Bureau Federation, came to town the other day with a few of his Triple-A officials. Mr. O'Neill, who is helping the Third District to fight against foreign blackstrap molasses when it hurts the sale of American corn and grains, is worried about the parity payment money. He is not yet sure just what will happen to the suggested streamlined processing tax proposal.

The Department of Agriculture is short about nine million dollars with which to make parity payments to farmers for the 1939 crop. The trouble is the Department couldn't figure just exactly how many farmers were going to comply with the program. Congress gave the Department $212,000,000 for the 1939 payments. The Congress gave the department $225,000,000 for the 1940 payments, but that is for the next crop of cotton, wheat and corn. The Congress has now been asked to transfer about nine or ten millions of the 1940 fund to the 1939 funds. A joint resolution to do this may be passed within the next few days. Nebraska is short about $13,000 for the 1939 parity payments.

About the same amount of money for farm forestry under the Norris-Doxey act will be provided this year according to word coming out of the sub-committee.

THE NEBRASKA SCENE

(By The Lowell Service)

Lincoln—With the advisers of Governor Cochran sullenly fighting a rear-guard action, liberal-minded members of the unicameral increased old age assistance payments approximately 25 per cent, forced immediate payment of the excess gasoline-tax collections, sent burial expense bills to the counties, and voted to release liens on realty owned by old age assistance clients.

The special session failed to do a number of important things, namely: Administration forces protected Neil Vandemoer, assistance director, and Chairman Eubank of the board of control from embarrassing questions. An investigation of these agencies, state house employees claimed, was barred by the special session call of Governor Cochran. Likewise, there could be no probing of excessive expenses at the state house; no look-see into the banking and insurance departments; no questioning about the alleged hamstringing of several sections of the direct primary law.

Several times an informal caucus of the members discussed an adjournment of the session and the issuance of a new call. However, it was decided that the state house pressure and the special lobby groups were elements that could not be combated without a long session.

Senator Callan, whose statement of conditions, printed exclusively in this column, Oct. 21, 1939, caused the special session, succeeded in passing a resolution unprecedented in the history of the state. Surmising that the dilatory tactics in the legislature were for the purpose of delaying all increases in assistance checks until spring, he introduced a resolution January 10, instructing the department to draw checks on the new basis. In it, he declared that the relief measures would be passed. Thirty-three senators supported the declaration. Not until this resolution had been approved, did the opponents of old age assistance give up the struggle.

The lobby was in the full flower of its strength; entertainment was lavish; hospitality was open handed.

The legislature approved a resolution urging congress to favor a two-million-dollar allocation for the Cedar Valley irrigation project. Sentiment was expressed for the Republican Valley developments. The Lower Platte Valley project made progress, and the Ak-Sar-Ben Public Power and Irrigation district completed the last investigations required by the state engineer.

At Washington, the hydro officials attended conferences designed to iron out difficulties. Senator Norris turned in data which materially assisted in the reorganization. As a result of the Carmody fiasco at Hastings, and the elaborate banquet given by private power company officials at Omaha, PWA officials expressed apprehension. Adverse criticism and caustic comments have been going to Washington.

Chambers of commerce in out-state towns have exerted a powerful influence. It was stated last week that the private companies would join the public power districts in unified action to promote irrigation developments, even when power was generated.

The bitter feud between the Cochran and Burke forces smoldered at the $25-a-plate Jackson day dinner at Omaha. Anti-Cochranites left the banquet with vehement denunciation of National Committeeman Quigley on their lips.

Senator Connally of Texas, a colleague of Senator Burke, was the guest of honor. Burke's friends claim that the junior senator was slighted and kept from meeting his fellow senator. At the banquet, they claim that Quigley made frequent mention of Governor Cochran and read telegrams from him and from the promoters of the Jackson day dinner at Minneapolis, where Cochran delivered an address.

The Omaha dinner was a financial success, but it is evident that the factional strife between the governor and the junior senator was intensified. A rumor was in circulation that a rival candidate for national committeeman might be filed to oppose Quigley.

Nebraska petroleum dealers are organizing to make a concerted attack on the diversion of gasoline-tax funds from highway construction. The last legislature appropriated $50,000 for advertising the state's resources. Governor Cochran named Keith Neville head of the commission; the latter filed for the democratic nomination for governor. Independent oil dealers attacked the legality of the act, and the suit is now pending in the Lancaster county district court. The gasoline dealers will battle to have the gas tax limited to four cents, and to amend the present price-posting law, so that the dealers may list the tax item separately from the actual cost of the gasoline.

The pastor, Alice Sexsmith, and Martha Switzer on Wednesday went to Page to meet with the young people representing the northwest league group of the Norfolk district for the purpose of setting up the Mid-winter Institute program. One of the main features of this program will be an address by Rev. Harold Sandall, returned delegate to the Amsterdam World Youth Conference.

Emil O. Hledik of Oakdale, Nebraska, and Edna M. Schober of Ewing, were granted a marriage license by County Judge Louis Reimer on January 13th, and were united in marriage on January 14, by the Rev. L. D. Carpenter at Page.

Mrs. Harry Little arrived Wednesday from Wausau, Nebr., to take her daughter, Beverly, back home. On their way they planned to stop a few days at Cedar Rapids. Beverly had spent the past few days at her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Alex McConnell.
