

Teen Tattler —

Why Not a Few Letters from Teen Agers About Teen Agers?

By MARY DEVINE BRENNAN

Hi and Happy Hallowe'en to you! October is nearly over, November is practically here, and it's Hallowe'en time again.

Too many teenagers seem to consider Hallowe'en as the "official night" for persecution of grown-ups. But 'tisn't so, kids. Hallowe'en is the night for Jack-o-lanterns, black cats, and witches on broomsticks — not the night for soaping windows and ringing doorbells.

Why don't you have some real fun this year? Get the gang together for a spook party or something. You'll have the time of your lives and the "old folks" will love you for it.

For Hallowe'en fun, old style, you might get a few ideas by learning how teenagers of other centuries spent their October 31sts.

About Hallowe'en: In the first place, as every hep high schooler knows, the name means "hallowed evening" and refers to the night before All Saints' day. Long before the coming of Christianity, though,

Tenth Yearly Report of Self-Regulation

Just off the press is a printed report presenting some of the aims and accomplishments of the brewing industry's self-regulation program in its first decade of service to Nebraska. Literally, as well as figuratively, this program is "an open book."

Nebraska has done a better than average job in the field of alcoholic beverage control — this is generally conceded. The annual report booklet analyzes some of the contributing factors, including the part played by the brewing industry itself.

The purpose of the report is to help the public fully understand brewing industry self-regulation and, through this better understanding, give the program opportunity to be of even greater service in the future.

Several thousand copies of the report have gone to public officials and civic leaders throughout the state. A card or letter will bring you a copy promptly.

the traditions and superstitions of Hallowe'en were beginning. The toga-ed teenagers of ancient Rome ducked for apples as part of the celebration of the festival of Romana, the goddess of fruits and seeds. They got just as wet as you do, too, and probably laughed just as hard.

In Scotland the girls, who were as romance-minded as today's Clark Gable fans, had a custom with which even you sophisticated seniors might have fun. The Scotch teen queen sat down before a mirror at midnight, cut an apple into nine pieces, and held each on the point of her knife before eating it, hoping that the face of her "true love" would appear in the mirror and that he would ask for the last slice. This ritual had to be carried out in complete silence and with a straight face for even the slightest of smiles would shatter the spell.

The Irish girl did it differently. She would put a glass of water with a silver of wood in it beside her bed and before she fell asleep she would say,

"Husband mine, that is to be, "Come this night and rescue me."

During the night then she would dream of falling off a bridge. A man would jump in to save her. He would be the man she was to marry—or so the Irish girl would tell you.

Nearly 200 years ago in Ireland the teenage peasants were going from house-to-house asking for money. When enough was collected, they bought food, and had a big feast. So, you see, even our "tricks or treats" is nothing new. (By the way, if you do go "trick or treating" this year, keep it friendly and forget about the tricks even if there are no treats. And, please, kids, don't expect much. There are quite a few of you teenagers in town, you know, and people can't be expected to feed you all.)

Whatever you decide to do on Hallowe'en act like the smart characters you are and be sure that you don't cause trouble for yourselves or for others.

Hallowe'en used to be fun night for everyone. Try to keep it that way.

Do you have any ideas for the Tattler? Since the column is for you teenagers and about you teenagers, we would appreciate a few ideas from you teenagers. We want to give you what you want, so help us, won't you? Just send your letters to The Frontier or me here at Clarke college, Dubuque, Ia., but put the postman to work. We want to hear from everyone of you.

Back to Hallowe'en again, if the little brother or sister wants a Jack-o'-lantern, mid-ge size, you can carve one from a thick skinned orange and put a birthday candle inside. Have fun, kids, but be sure your fun doesn't hurt anyone else.

See you next week!

Conard Quarter Brings $35.50

STUART—A quarter section of grassland, belonging to Rudolph Conard, located seven miles southwest of Stuart, was sold at auction last Thursday to Lincoln Hamilton, also of Stuart. Ernie Weller, the auctioneer, said the selling price was $35.50 per acre.

Freed 320 Acres Sells at $40.50

ATKINSON — The Freed property, north and east of Atkinson, was sold to Edward Stearns, of Atkinson, for $40.50 an acre Saturday afternoon. The tract consists of 320 acres of "good" Holt county farm ground. The Freed place was homesteaded by John Freed, father of the late Bert Freed, of Atkinson. He came to the place in 1882 from Peoria, Ill. The Bert Freed's farmed the place until the death of Mr. Freed in 1943. Since then a granddaughter and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Schaaf, have farmed it. This will be the first time since homestead days that the place was out of Freed ownership. Ernie Weller was the auctioneer.

Other Atkinson News

Sibley Jines and son, of Pearytown, Tex., and Claude Saunders, of Balk, Okla., called at the Harley Everett home in Atkinson Tuesday. They were on their way to South Dakota to hunt. While there they picked out three English pointers to be shipped back South for next year's season.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Spindler visited Mr. and Mrs. Engene Lee and family in Norfolk on Saturday and Sunday. Mrs. Waldron Brady accompanied them and visited at the home of her son and his family, Mr. and Mrs. Myrlin Wilson.

Sgt. John Judge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Judge, of Atkinson, arrived home from Guam Sunday morning. Jack, who has been in the regular Army for approximately three years, has been stationed on Guam for two years. He expects to be home about three weeks and will then be assigned to a new post.

Mrs. Vera Planck is temporarily managing the cafe recently purchased by John Miskimins. The new management last Thursday took over what has been known as Vera's cafe.

B. H. Wilson left Sunday for Sioux City to bring his wife and baby son home with him. Mrs. Wilson has been with relatives since leaving the hospital.

FATHER DIES

A. P. Jaskowiak attended funeral services last Thursday for his father, J. S. Jaskowiak, 79, who died at Chadron. Services were held there. Mrs. A. P. Jaskowiak also attended the rites.
