

Maude Silverstrand Takes You for a Walk Down Atkinson's Memory Lane

By Maude Silverstrand
Special Correspondent
ATKINSON — Do you ever get that lonely, longing feeling for your old hometown? I'm not suggesting that you've been away for a long time. Perhaps you've been right here all along. But the old town—Atkinson—that we used to know has grown up and is gone!

I heard an oldtimer remark the other day, "I hardly know anyone anymore."

Let's take a Saturday night stroll through the streets of the Atkinson of yesteryear. Surely any oldtimer will see at least one familiar face or place.

We'll stop first at the Graphic office to chat awhile with Mr. Mende, the editor. Charlie Moss and John Brady have just come out of Scrip-ter's restaurant across the street and John Taylor, Bill and Bert Dexter and Bill Cor-rigan are going into Gene Carter's for a game of pool.

Jim De Quase and Anson Havens are in their usual chairs in front of the Com-mercial hotel. Mr. Harrison and Lillian are sitting on the steps talking to them.

I need some groceries and meat so we'll stop at Al Took-er's and old Arch Walrath's. Isn't that Ollie Sturdevant and Marie McGuffey coming out of Hart's store over there? I suppose he got in some new hair ribbons or something.

Must be a skating party in the making. Look at the kids in front of McNichols — the Miller kids, Helen and Hazel Williams, the Dickerson kids, the Jarvis kids, Jessie and Bea Brook, the Morgans, the Han-kes. Gee whiz, the town's full of kids! Hank Stansberry better watch out tonight, it's Hallowe'en.

I see Paul Schultz' barber shop is full as usual and Helen has some lovely new hats in her window. Look at that plume, will you?

Lumsden, E. J. Mack and Frank Butney are sitting on the bank steps.

John Bauman and Hez Chambers have some grocery specials tonight. I wonder if Kilmurry got in those new-fangled leather duo-folds yet?

The Fleming, Tomsek, Blake and Griffen kids have joined the group in front of McNichols now, but if we want to see the show we'll have to rush. Al turned the lights on at the rink a long time ago.

I hope you've had a good time tonight. Maybe we can take another walk someday and you'll remember the Farley kids, the younger Miller kids, the Milspaugh girls, and a host of others along with me.

Bye for now.

U. S. Flag Flies Atop Legion Club

ATKINSON — A United States flag now flies atop the American Legion club building here. Legion officials explained that since the flag pole was removed from the city square, the Legion has been seeking a location for a new pole.

The club's bimonthly news bulletin to members declared: "It is only fitting and proper that our flag should fly from our building as a constant re-minder of an organization whose only purpose is service to God, our country and our community."
