PRAIRIELAND TALK

The weather. Maybe enough has been said and printed. Mostly grumbling. Not even rugged Nebraskans are volunteering for polar epeditions. Enough of Arctic Circle conditions for them here at home. Only a few days since sunbeams glowed from out the smiling heavens and water run in streams from melting snows. The heaps of snow were fast becoming a sorry memory. This morning, yesterday morning, the morning before heavy clouds obscured the smiling heavens. Noiselessly, calmly the clouds unfold and let fall their feathery treasure.

Again there is spread across the land a blanket of snow growing inch by inch in depth. Today there it lies a foot of downy white motionless and The snow dusted upon the dark green of cedar and pine carries over into late Winter the adornment of Christmas and stand forth upon the purified landscape as the emblems of nature's transcending artis-

Out beyond my own horizon there may be the harsh pinch of suffering and want. To such the course of nature tells only of its light heed of human suffer-While snow continues falling this morning maybe adding another foot to the immaculate blanket there is both the cherished hope that winds will not come out of the north to blow out their rage upon the new fallen snow and the haunting fear that they will.

When in Lincoln meet Miss Jane Moyer, of Madison, a thoroughly competent appearing lady at a desk in the attorney general's department. She is the new assistant Attorney General of Nebraska.

I don't know whether it was his 10 thousand dollar job he was fighting for or less ulterior motive but it is hoped Mr. Remis a thorough going Yankee as he goes back into the federal commerce department. It seems that a federal employee who has fallen under the spy investigation of the congress would make a hit with the public by simply declaring his loyalty and say that under the circumstances for the good of the service I am quitting.
