Locomotives in Snow Pictured in Colliers

The Burlington railroad's two locomotives, which reposed partially overturned in a snowbank for almost two months at a point six miles East of here, are pictured in the current issue of Colliers magazine.

Earlier the aerial photo received widespread reproduction in newspapers throughout the country. A story by Quentin Reynolds accompanies the photograph.

The two locomotives ran into trouble on December 30 while pushing a wedge-type snowplow. Crews abandoned them in the face of fresh storms and rail traffic was tied up for almost two months.

O'Neill

- We will hold our regular livestock auction on Thursday, March 10.
- Flood and road conditions are such that nothing can be forecast definitely in regard to the run of livestock that is expected. However, if the roads South of O'Neill continue to improve, we can expect 300 cattle and the usual run of feeder hogs and butchers. Otherwise, the run will be shortened somewhat, but we will hold the sale regardless.
- Phone us at number 2—O'Neill—for more particulars on Thursday morning.
