PRAIRIELAND TALK

In the office of Mr. Dawes at the courthouse is a chart showing the 4-H and women's clubs throughout the county. Many young people on the farms and ranches are more interested in the educational and profitable work of these youth's clubs than they are in dances and pleasure parties.

Had that former federal official who plunged to his death out of a 16th story window turned his attention to the victorious shout of St. Paul instead of the cry of despair of a Greek philosopher it wouldn't have happened.

The estate of a dead Lancaster county farmer turns over to the United States treasury $24,000 in government bonds, the unusual gifts of the testator. So much of the national debt is thus cancelled.

Washington commentators are rough with the statesmen. Here is one definition: "A statesman is one who will promise anything for a vote."

The wallflower will retain fragrance and beauty; the bruised reed lying in the gutter nobody bothers to pick up.

The saloon, the last stronghold of the male, has surrendered to the female.
