High School Principal Randall ure. Smith, they did something about it—on the premise that "it ranchers in Northern Nebraska, wasn't fair to the student to has holdings totaling around permit him to go through high 100,000 acres. school with a definite indifference toward spelling and a the auction this week. weakness in the knowledge of the course.'

They compiled lists of words most often misspelled, and each day at 1 p.m. students work for 10 minutes writing their daily short spelling les-son of 10 words which have been taken from papers of the previous week. Any word misspelled by more than 10 per-cent of the group is repeated in the next day's list.

In this manner 100 words were Jean Humphrey, senior, Onic McClurg, a junior, and George Suffers Broken Leg Kahler, a sophomore, missed in Cabling Mishap—only one word during the daily ATKINSON — T
