Another Sarajevo?

Shortly after the end of World War I this writer stood beside a cracked piece of pavement on the main street of Sarajevo, Yugoslavia. The crack marked the place where a bomb, thrown at the Archduke Franz Ferdinand on June 28, 1914, had touched off the bloodiest war so far seen by man.

The bomb had been thrown seven years before I then a young reconstruction worker in the Balkans, visited Sarajevo; yet in those seven years the cracked pavement had not been repaired. Reconstruction moves slow in the Balkans, thought I—at that time being a very young idealist—but it moves sure. Never again would war come to sick and weary Europe.

Well another war did come; and today events are shaping up in these same tired but turbulent Balkans which could bring still another Sarajevo almost over night.

Should Tito be assassinated, on the Hungarian - Yugoslav border start south, should revolt flare in Bulgaria, Hungary, Romania, Czechoslovakia, then war might come all over again. And war in Europe has a habit of being contagious.

Danger vs. Hope

Yet with all its dynamite-laden danger, the Balkans situation also presents one of the most optimistic developments in the cold war against Russia. For to date, Russia has suffered serious defeats.

There are three phases to the Balkan battle, one laid in Washington, one in Yugoslavia, one in the other satellite countries. Here is how they stack up:

SITUATION 1 — Washington: Without benefit of fanfare, the state department has been doing an efficient job of boycotting trade to the little iron curtain countries. Several million dollars worth of goods ordered by Poland and Czechoslovakia are on New York docks ready to move. But they can't get clearance.

The Polish ambassador has been beating a path to state department doors, then to the commerce department then back again. All he gets is the polite-around. The state department says export licenses are issued by the commerce department and the commerce department says policy is fixed by the state department.

The run-around is no accident. It's deliberate and carefully planned. And it's having real repercussions behind the little iron curtain.

SITUATION 2 — Behind the little iron curtain: Near economic chaos now reigns in Poland, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, Hungary, Romania. This is partly a result of the U. S. trade boycott. People have money but they can't buy.

In addition, farmers are revolting at collectivization, national pride is coming to the front, and people generally don't like their Russian masters.

Tito's Spies
 Also, Tito, formerly an NKVD operator trained by the Soviet, is now using NKVD methods against the Soviet, not merely in Yugoslavia, but in all the satellite countries. He has about as many underground agents in Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria and Romania as Moscow has working against him.

Should this network of undercover revolt start popping, it may start a chain reaction throughout all eastern Europe.

SITUATION 3 — Yugoslavia: Tito has had 30 million dollars in gold salted away in Portugal. He now has withdrawn five million dollars to finance revolts in other satellite countries. Once disliked by the Serbs, Tito is no longer hero thanks to opposing Moscow's farm collectivization. In fact, Tito, still a staunch Communist, is stronger at home than ever, could not be kicked out of office, can only be removed by assassination.

So far, Moscow has tried the latter course—and much more frequently than has leaked to the press. Apparently Stalin, worried over what goes on in the other satellite countries, doesn't want to risk open war with their friend Yugoslavia.

Through U. S. eyes—if the Red army should cross the Yugoslav border, U. S. military experts believe Tito's troops can hold out about three months.

To bolster Yugoslavia's defense, the United States has enough arms to supply four divisions stored on the British island of Malta. They could be rushed to the Dalmatian coast in a hurry.

U. S. worry—Should Yugoslavia fall completely to Moscow, then Greece, according to U. S. experts, would soon go Communist. They point out that it was not until Tito cut off supplies to the Greek guerrillas that the Greek army made any real progress in cleaning up the Communists.
