I read a book last week. The author dipped his facile pen in fire and seared raw facts of life into my brain. Up from the mire he dragged dark truth and flaunted it. He made all youth abnormal, all love lust and God a jest. And as I read I knew his soul was warped; his mind must know despair, thinking all truth was ugliness laid bare.

And then I read another book. The author sat on the very throne of truth and used a pen far mightier than the sword. He wrote of youth triumphant, clean and fine. He wrote of sin, compassion in each line. He wrote of love—it blossomed like a rose sprung from good soil. He wrote of One, giver of that great trinity of gifts—life, love and beauty.

And when he was done, I somehow knew my stumbling feet had trod the trail he'd blazed for me to his Friend, God—Claire McClure in "I Love Books."

A father gave his little son a jigsaw puzzle of the world to put together. In a few minutes he had it correctly assembled, to the astonishment of dad. "You see, father," his son explained, "on the other side is a picture of a boy, and I thought if I got the boy together right, the world would take care of itself."

In telling us "what this country needs," a good $3 pair of shoes has been overlooked.

Our country schools are as good as they ever were or probably ever will be if twice eight million dollars is added to the school budget. Less sports tournaments and additional study requirements might improve the product of city schools.

I am leaving this week for a month's sojourn in Glendale and other California points of interest. I am accompanying my son-in-law, Mr. Lindholm, who has been in Nebraska a few days on business, on an overland trip by automobile.

An honest man is heard from. The pilot of the plane that crashed out at Cheyenne takes all the responsibility. Down there in official Washington they blame everybody but themselves for the general worry.

Candidate caravans have visited most of the counties and the voters have learned but little other than that each group brings railing accusations against the other. Heavy arguments to the contrary notwithstanding, the eight million dollars necessary to finance the "ham and egg" school amendment would have to be raised some way.
