PRAIRIELAND ... TALK

By ROMAIN SAUNDERS Route 5 ATKINSON

GLENDALE, CALIF. — The community in which I am temporarily lies between two sullen ridges of mountains. Recently, on one of these, the scene below disclosed congested city life stretching for a distance of 30 miles.

How one from prairieland plants himself into the picture to become a permanent dot on the landscape may be accounted for by a terror of the more severe climate "back home" as well as the lure of financial profit during the period of supplying material for the crash and roar of guns on battle fields.

Nothing here is "square with the world" and a Nebraskan is confused as to directions. Gay colors on floral bloom, tall palms with dead foliage hanging high above like gray locks of a discouraged old lady, trees unknown in prairieland, and strange varieties of plant life make prowling around interesting for a time.

But you can't get the fascination of the prairieland out of a Nebraskan quite that easy.

One of the show places of southern California is a cemetery. The works of art are headed by "The Last Supper," a beautiful window in the memorial court of honor in Forest Lawn cemetery.

The vast building contains many priceless works of art; the more gruesome compartments containing the ashes of the dead and long rows of burial vaults, where repose the crumbling remains of those who have met life's final tragedy.

In the open burial grounds, comprising 300 acres, are no monuments. A simple plate marks each spot and grass and flowers give the aspect of a park.

In the "Last Supper" window has been recreated in stained glass Leonardo da Vinci's great masterpiece. This window was done by the last of that artist's descendants, Miss Moretti, of Perugia, Italy, and required seven years to complete it.

As of November 18 there were 679 movie flunkies and their union bosses in jail in the Los Angeles area. Strikes and unlawful picketing, accompanied by violence and bombing the homes of non-strikers, has brought criminal action against insolent union "agents" and more-or-less innocent men and women who have been in their clutches. Nobody seems to know what the grievances are. Maybe just a flare up accompanying the worldwide wave of unrest, crime and violence. Los Angeles papers report daily robberies of 50-cents to $50,000.

The United States postal service does a good job of it for the most part. It has slipped badly at one southern California postoffice, and by reason of which some of my mail has been fired back to the starting point and publishers of papers have been notified to send my copies to an old address of my son in Lincoln. He left a forwarding address with the Glendale office two years ago, and I suffer the penalty of having given him my name. Hence, have been deprived of "news from home" through papers being cut off.

So the AFL is going to "fight" Nebraska voters in the courts, is it? Nebraska citizens spoke at the recent election just how they feel about the close shop and an amendment adopted by vote of the citizens. Would any court say it was "unconstitutional?" And the school amendment advocates propose to go to the legislature to get what the voters have denied them.

OUT OF OLD NEBRASKA ...

State's First Thanksgiving Also First Legal Holiday

By Supt. James C. Olson, State Historical Society

Nebraska's first Thanksgiving was celebrated November 30, 1854, a day set aside by proclamation of Acting Governor Thomas B. Cuming. Thus, in addition to being the state's first Thanksgiving, it was the first legal holiday ever to be celebrated in Nebraska.

The press of the state—consisting at that time of but one paper, the Bellevue Palladium remarked, "Although we have, as in all new countries, comparatively little to be thankful for, we have sufficient to inspire our gratitude and blessing."

It really was more a celebration of what was to come, rather than in thanksgiving for what already had arrived, for by Thanksgiving day, 1854, the territorial pioneers had not yet given the soil of Nebraska an appreciable test.

Frankly, those early pioneers were not too much interested in farming. Most of them were more concerned with the quick fortunes that were to be made in laying out town sites, selling town lots, and engaging in commerce. As J. Sterling Morton later said, the greater part of their time was spent "talking and meditating upon the prospective value of city property. Young Chicagoans, incipient New Yorks, precocious Philadelphias, and infant Londons were duly staked out, lithographed, divided into shares, and puffed with becoming unctious and complaisance."

Those pioneers, confident of the success of their enterprise, had no qualms about giving thanks for blessings still in the future.

A mass meeting was held in the Presbyterian mission and Rev. William Hamilton preached a sermon appropriate to the occasion. According to the Palladium, "considering the place, Here From California — CHAMBERS—Chauncy Woods is spending a few weeks with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Weldon Woods. He has been employed by the Standard Oil company in Richmond, Calif., but complications, resulting from an operation while in Army service, have forced him to give up his work and rest.

Couple Charvaried — CHAMBERS — A large crowd gathered Friday evening and charvaried Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Cooke at their home here.

they seemed to manifest in the exercises that belong to this time-hallowed institution."

Doubtless the editor's mellow view of the day was in part brought on by the "excellent Thanksgiving dinner" which he enjoyed at the home of G. S. Tozier, "whose lady knows full well how to provide for such an occasion."

Indications as to some of the delicacies enjoyed by the editor may be found in Peter Sarpy's advertisement in the paper of the same date. This famous Missouri river fur trader and merchant announced that he had just received "a large assortment of selected merchandise adapted to the wants of all in the new and thriving community."

Among the grocery items were included: "Crushed, clarified, loaf and brown sugar, molasses, syrup molasses, golden syrup, superior tea, Rio and Java coffee, sassafras, ginger, pepper, cloves, spice, cinnamon, ground ginger, nutmegs, snuffs, tobacco, cigars, pipes, soap, candles, vinegar, pickles, pepper-sauce, etc."
