OUT OF OLD NEBRASKA 'HORDES' IMPORTED TO HELP OMAHA

The recent election brings to mind the first election ever held in Nebraska. The date was December 12, 1854. The officers to be chosen were representatives in the territorial legislature and the territorial delegate to Congress.

The candidates did not have long to campaign. Indeed, the nominees from Bellevue district were chosen only three days before the election. Despite this, however, and the fact that the press thought it "worthy of remark, that no intoxicating liquor was made use of, and nothing occurred unworthy of the place," for enthusiastic campaigning and vigorous mudslinging not many elections since can hold a candle to that first battle of the ballot.

Douglas county was the scene of the most bitter contest. The issue was the location of the territorial capital.

Bellevue, the oldest settlement in the territory, thought it had the capitol pretty well sewed up, but when Gov. Francis Burt died a few days after his arrival in the territory, Thomas Cuming, the territorial secretary, became acting governor, and Cuming favored the upstart village of Omaha.

Cuming had urged the citizens of Bellevue to support his administration and promised to put them in a district by themselves if they would only do so. Led by hotheads like J. Sterling Morton (who, incidentally, had been in the territory only a little over a week), this the citizens of Bellevue refused to do. As a result they got placed in the same district with Omaha, and their candidates were overwhelmed by the voters of the city destined to become the territorial capital.

The Omaha vote, according to the Bellevue Palladium, had been swollen by "hordes" of men imported from Council Bluffs, Ia., on election day.

The people of Bellevue did not take their defeat lying down, but during the remainder of Gov. Cuming's term fought him bitterly both in and out of the legislature.

Mass meetings were held and resolutions adopted denouncing his course in the most vigorous fashion. A quotation from one of the resolutions will show that they pulled no punches:

"Resolved, that we commend the people of Bellevue, for their Christian forbearance towards acting Gov. Cuming, in not offering him personal violence, for as gross an insult by him, as could be offered by a tyrant to a free people, in refusing to give them a separate district and allow them to elect members of the legislature unless they would pledge themselves to elect men as he should dictate."

Food Gifts Leaflet Available to Women

Suggestions for food gifts, decorations and gift wrappings highlight the current demonstrations being given by Holt county home extension clubs, according to Miss Catherine Kirwan, of O'Neill, the county home extension agent.

Among the food gift suggestions offered in an extension leaflet are jars of honey, jars of popcorn, glasses of jelly, home cured bacon, a dozen eggs, cheese in bowls, salted nuts, packages of doilies, dressed chicken in cellophane, homemade mincemeat or canned chicken, loaves of homemade bread, and others.

Copies of the leaflet "Holiday Food Gifts" may be obtained without charge at the county extension office in the courthouse, Miss Kirwan said.

This is the season for turkey, chicken, and other poultry. Questions on carving the fowl, cooking, making the dressing and dressing up left overs frequently arise. The county agent's office is prepared to answer these questions for there are several bulletins available discussing these problems and giving recipes.
