PRAIRIELAND ... TALK

By ROMAINE SAUNDERS ATKINSON Route 5

LINCOLN — Nebraska as a state has now attained the venerable age of 80 years. I happen to be one who has "grewed up" from early boyhood on prairieland, experienced the vicissitudes, some privations, the heroic efforts at times against the odds of wind and weather, the pleasures, the freedom of a colt running with the herd in open country, lax laws, and no tax collectors.

The pioneers, with those who have come into the picture following them, have built a great state because they had something to build on. As we observe statehood anniversary on March 1, it is well to remember not only what has been given as a heritage by the pioneers but what we can give as the citizens' contribution to maintain the dignity and honor of our great commonwealth.

An attraction at one of the movie houses was filmed at Sam McKelvie's By-the-Way ranch south of Valentine and bears the title, "A Sea of Grass." I wonder what Eli Hershiser down at Norfolk would think of this movie version of a great cow country in comparison with what he knew of that same grass land when he and Johnny Carney went up that way from O'Neill to ride the herds in the days of the open range.

The American Federation of Labor has set another peg in the line of public disfavor. Suit has been started to determine by court decree the constitutional right of Nebraska citizens to vote an amendment to their state constitution. The right to work amendment carried by popular vote last November and now comes a new thing in court action denying the right of citizens to make changes or additions in the fundamental law of their state. Only one thing is conceivable in the findings of a court in this instance.

A trip over to Council Bluffs recently with a friend, who was interested in a four-row outfit for cultivating listed corn being offered at a farm sale, was the means of learning something of conditions with farmers in Iowa.

The land is taxed from $2 to $6 an acre. Renters give one-half of the product of the farm to the landlord and judging from the quantity of first-class equipment and fine stock sold at that sale the renter is going places, too.

My friend planned to go $300 on the machine he wanted, about the price new, but it sold for $505. Bidders were present from a distance from both Iowa and Nebraska. The 300-acre farm the tenant was leaving had been sold for $200 an acre. He said as the new owner "wanted it all but the work" he was quitting.

Marion Anderson, the Negro singer, is not backed by the smug billing outfits but has concert engagements extending two years in advance. She is to appear in Lincoln in the near future. The color of skin means nothing in the popular eye when the voice is attune as Miss Anderson lends to the note of song a beauty of voice that has captivated American and European audiences.

Twenty-three girls are taking courses in a Canadian college for ordination to the ministry when they will go to the frost-bitten natives in regions bordering the Arctic circle to establish religious communities. All churches are now reaching to the ends of the Earth to add to their lists of communicants, and coeds are joining the ranks of the clergy.

There came last week a brief period that gave pause to the mad milling around of restless men — known as Brotherhood week. Probably nothing accomplished beyond a momentary flutter of a worthwhile human impulse that comes to the surface all too little.

None of the other gentlemen in the legislative assembly have come forward with a tax plan to reduce public expenditures. Neither has it been shown that the "desperate plight" of state institutions is anything more than imagination reduced to propaganda. Talk up a thing and you begin to believe it.

The departure of a Tammany leader from this life drew this from Mark Twain: "I refuse to attend his funeral, but I wrote a nice letter explaining that I approved of it."

The boys down at Washington tell us of the farm income, but the farm women will tell you of the farm outgo.

"Speak well of your enemies; remember you made them," observes Jess Lister of the Wamego, (Kans.) Times.

Any additional taxes provided by legislative act will be an invitation to larger holdings of tax exempt securities.

The clerks now say thank you; come again.
